Cleared in Slaying

Louise Campbell, 23, above, was ordered freed from jail today after authorities at Warren ruled as accidental the shooting on Christmas eve of her mother, Mrs. Cordelia Campbell, 55, daughter-in-law of the former head of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, shown in inset. Mrs. Campbell and other witnesses at the Campbell home, shown below, agreed that Mrs. Campbell was wounded when she attempted to seize the gun from her daughter's hand after the latter started shooting at Christmas tree lights.

Offer Feeble Resistance as Japanese Push Forward in Shantung Province.

SHANGHAI—(AP)—The United States gunboat Sacramento steamed out of Tsingtao harbor today, carrying American refugees from that Shantung province seaport isolated by advancing Japanese armies.

Dispatches from the threatened city said 280 Americans had evacuated, many of them on the Sacramento, which was due in Shanghai, some 400 miles to the south, on Thursday. Earlier this week Tsingtao advances were that there were 300 Americans there, with the Sacramento, the destroyer Pope, and the cruiser Marblehead standing by to aid them.

City's Fall Near. Fall of Tsingtao to Japanese swarming southward into Shantung province seemed imminent, Tsingtao provincial capital, 200 miles to the west, was in Japanese hands. Other Japanese columns raised the Rising Sun flag over Weihai, railway point less than 100 miles west of Tsingtao.

Provincial forces of Shantung war lord Han Fu-Chu took up positions on nearby White Horse mountain, after their feeble resistance at Tsingtao. In Shanghai, observers raised the question of whether General Han had made a deal with the Japanese.

Reports from Macao, Portuguese colony off the South China coast, said Japanese "cruiser" had "sunk" the "Mandarin" over which Portugal claims jurisdiction.

Several huts were set on fire after the shelling 200 Japanese bluejackets were said to have landed from a cruiser and two destroyers. Purpose of the landing was not known.

U. S., Mexico Renew Plan For Purchases of Silver.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Treasury and Mexican officials announced today continuance of United States purchases of Mexican silver through January.

The understanding was reached in a conference this morning between Mexican Finance Minister Eduardo Suarez and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

The purchases will be made on the same basis as in the past year—the United States will pay 45 cents an ounce for newly-mined Mexican silver delivered at New York.

The conferees made it clear, however, the understanding was a stop-gap pending negotiation of a permanent silver agreement between the two countries.

Navy Forges Chain of Off-Shore Forts As Nation Spends Billion Yearly on Arms

Draw Buffer of Ships As Protection In Case of War.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A world-wide race for naval power, war in China and Spain cloud international horizons. America, with a scary eye on dying arms limitation treaties and disturbances abroad, has been spending record sums on its military forces. Alexander R. George, Associated Press staff writer, has written a series of three articles on how the program is getting along, its cost and what the detailed defense plans are. This is the first article of the series.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE (Associated Press Staff Writer)

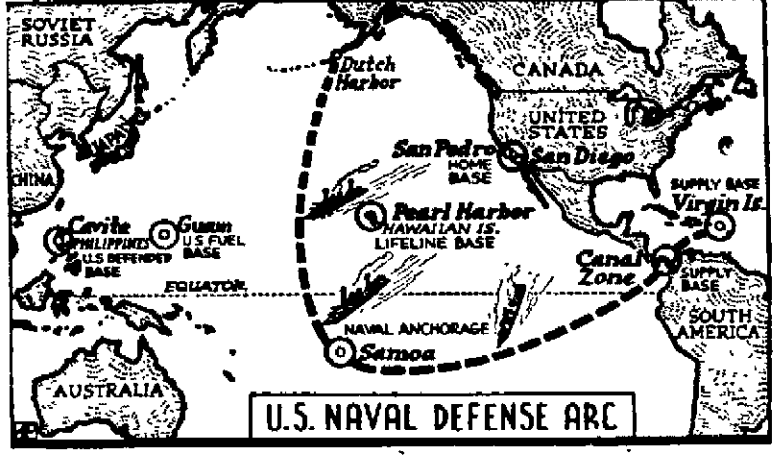

WASHINGTON—Our defense is costing big money these days—almost a billion dollars a year.

That is more than it has ever cost before in peace time.

Congress has decided to spend this huge sum annually because naval limitation treaties and other buffers against war have failed.

"Jane's Fighting Ships," authoritative yearbook on world navies, discloses in its 1937 edition, just out, a world-wide race for sea power limited only by the supply of men and materials. Britain plans almost to double her capital tonnage; Russia and Japan are sprinting for submarine supremacy; Germany, Italy and France have joined the contest.

And America, holding that our commerce and property abroad and, more important, our coastline must be protected, is keeping pace with the field. Besides ships now building or planned, our fleet, staff officers announce, is in the highest state of efficiency in its history. A quick survey of the 'round-the-world situation today reveals: The British fleet excels in striking power, with a huge complement of speedy cruisers and destroyers.

The Japanese and Italians excel in submarines, and the French in heavy-shooting battleships and cruisers. Germany excels in scientific efficiency of naval design, and Russia is supposed to have developed a fine fleet of submarines and torpedo boats.

America leads the fleets in heavy battleships and in its naval air force.

Industrial Mobilization. With ships now being built, the United States will have a fleet that can throw steel lines of defense across the oceans a thousand miles beyond our coasts. The army is motorizing its divisions and setting up a huge coast defense trap for any enemy that might penetrate the naval cordon. Backing up these defenses are the limitless raw materials of the United States and the industrial plants that can translate these resources into war equipment. The army has complete plans to mobilize our industrial strength in the event of war.

The navy, of course, is our first line of defense. Save for an entirely unlikely invasion from Mexico or Canada, an enemy would have to strike us from the sea.

Strategists long have studied our isolated geography and the possible combinations of enemy attacks, and have designed the strength of our fleet accordingly. Much of this design is secret, but roughly it conforms to the specifications laid down by Naval Secretary Claude Swanson.

"Our navy must be so mobile and self-sufficient that it can be projected a thousand miles or more from our coast and be maintained on this far distant station. This, in effect, will create a new elastic frontier of steel. Behind this frontier will be an oceanic hinterland of millions of square miles. Over this buffer state an enemy must send an air attack before it reaches the valuable and vulnerable cities of our coastline."

A Vast Arc. More important than anything else to a battle fleet are its bases. A baseless fleet soon would exhaust its fuel and become helpless.

Therefore, our naval defense plan is outlined by our naval map. The arc is anchored at one end in the Virgin Islands, in the Atlantic, and at the other in the Aleutians, off the coast of Alaska.

In between, it swings south from the Virgin Islands to the Canal Zone, west to the Samoan islands, thence northward to Hawaii and the bleak Aleutians. Its outermost extremity from the United States bumps the 180th meridian.

The United States fleet and its subsidiary units have their main base at the hub of this arc—San Pedro, Calif. Ships and planes can radiate outward to any point on the arc, like the spokes of a huge wheel.

To Replace Old Craft. The navy has a million tons of armored ships, 1,000-odd planes, and 33,000 men to shoot out from the central base to a danger spot. This force includes, however, about 200,000 tons of old vessels, incapable of delivering a swift, heavy blow at an enemy.

It is the purpose of the new average craft, with swift new vessels, among them are two battleships of 35,000 tons each, now building, and dozens of destroyers, submarines and cruisers.

Tomorrow: The Army.

Comparative Naval Tonnage
Great Britain	1,215,000
United States	1,083,000
Japan	750,000
France	470,000
Italy	250,000
Germany	150,000
Russia	250,000 (Including Many Obsolete Ships)
UNIT: 150,000 TONS

These estimates, best guesses available from the U. S. navy department, include some over-age ships which wouldn't be much good against modern guns. All seven nations, however, are pushing new construction.

County Board Head Named to State Post

Mitchell Appointed to Ohio Agriculture Board By Davey to Serve Until 1942; Will Succeed Palmer, Veteran Member.

Clifford L. Mitchell, chairman of the Richland county board of commissioners, was appointed to the state board of agriculture by Gov. Martin L. Davey today.

Mitchell's term will begin at once and will end Oct. 10, 1942. He succeeds L. B. Palmer of Pastakala, oldest member of the board of nine men and one woman. Palmer's term has expired.

A well-known raiser of purebred sheep, Mitchell will be in charge of the sheep exhibits at the Ohio state fair. His office pays no salary and will not interfere with his duties as county commissioner, he said today.

Director Backs Mitchell. Gov. Davey made the appointment on the recommendation of Earl Hanefeld, state director of agriculture, the Richland County Farm bureau and George B. Ganey, county agricultural agent.

Mitchell, a Democrat, said today that the movement for his appointment to the board started at the state fair last August when a group of exhibitors at the fair (Continued on Page 16, Col. 3)

Aid Parents Who Found Baby Slain Under Yule Tree

GREENBROOK, N. J.—(AP)—Their infant slain and laid under the Christmas tree with the presents after they had a dispute with a tenant, a village florist and his young wife wept hysterically today at the home of neighbors who kept them in seclusion. Womenfolk of the community took turns laying strong but gentle hands on Mrs. Louis Bordelon since she found the body of her 5-month-old Christina among the gifts she and her husband had bought for their first-born.

County Detective Charles Allegaard said Mrs. Sophie Arcuri, 24-year-old mother of a 2-month-old boy, confessed she slit the throat of the landlord's 5-month-old baby with a paring knife because "her baby was warm and mine was cold."

Mrs. Arcuri, police said, had acted erratically and aged visibly since the birth of her son. She was holding her son in her arms when police arrested her late yesterday.

DAVEY TO ASK STATE INQUIRY

Message Says Radio Address Will Call For Probe In All State Departments.

AKRON—(AP)—Governor Martin L. Davey on Jan. 3 will call a special session of the Ohio legislature to invite to both legislative and administrative departments of state government, it was learned here today.

The governor, it was reported, will issue the call in a radio address at 7:15 p. m. on that date. His address is to require 30 minutes.

A telegram from H. H. Hoesley of radio station WHKC, Columbus, to station WADC here read: "Very important, Governor Davey calling special session of house and senate. He will personally address with message requesting sweeping investigation of state legislative and administrative departments and requests sustaining your station Monday evening, Jan. 3, from 7:15 to 7:45."

At Columbus, Gov. Davey said he could not discuss his plans now. "There's nothing definite decided yet," he said.

Asked if any contemplated radio talk would concern a legislative investigation of state departments and the legislature itself, he replied: "That's news to me."

Retiring City Employees To Say 'Farewell' Tonight

Workers Who Relinquish Posts to New Administration Invited to Bring 'Crying Towels' to Dinner.

City hall employees were invited today to bring their "crying towels" when they get together at North Lake park tonight for the last official "family party" before they come to a parting of the ways early in January.

A covered-dish dinner will be held tonight for the official family, with wives, husbands and sweethearts included. And if advance reports mean anything, there will be nearly 100 persons gathered around the table tonight.

Farewell to Officials. The party really is a farewell to those officials and employees who relinquish their posts next week to the incoming Democratic administration.

The dinner is scheduled for 6 p. m. according to John Hess, bookkeeper in the sewer department, who promoted the idea.

However, there will be no "swan songs," Hess predicted. "That's definitely out," he said. "We are going out there to enjoy ourselves and everyone has been warned that there is to be no 'farewell' addresses. In fact they have been told that there is the possibility of being tossed out if one is attempted."

The seat of honor at the head of the table will go to Mayor Earl (Continued on Page 7, Col. 7)

KEEP 'CURFEW,' ANDERSON SAYS

Probate Judge Files Protest Against Extension of Night Club Hours.

A protest against the granting of an extension to 2:30 a. m. of the night club "curfew" ordinance in Mansfield was expressed today by Judge C. J. Anderson of the county juvenile court in a letter to Russell D. Porch, chairman of the city council committee named to study the question.

Judge Anderson was asked by Porch to express an opinion on the night club proprietors' petition. The present ordinance calls for closing at 1 a. m. of establishments where liquor is sold.

"If anything, the ordinance should be amended to shorter hours, and exclude any persons under 21 years of age from buying any type of alcoholic beverage," Judge Anderson said in his letter.

He also recommended that city council require places which dispense alcoholic beverages to close all day Sundays.

"The present handling of alcoholic beverages and liquor, so far as minors are concerned, is 20 times worse than the old-fashioned saloon, according to the juvenile judges in this state," he wrote.

"Those who dispense liquor to the public will either have to start to regulate their own business or the people of this state will regulate it for them in a short time," the judge predicted.

TELLS SHOOTING STORY

Daughter Says Gun Fired as Mother Attempted to Take It From Her.

WARREN—(AP)—The gunshot death of Mrs. Cordelia Campbell was ruled an accident today, and her 28-year-old daughter Louise was freed from the Trumbull county jail where she had been detained without charge since Saturday.

The young woman was whisked away from the jail by her attorney under guard of Sheriff Roy Hardman, who sought to bar the curious from the scene. She was driven to a cemetery for brief private funeral services and the burial of her mother.

Several plainclothesmen guarded the Tod cemetery mausoleum, where the brief services were held. They prevented access to any but members of the family and a few servants.

The Rev. S. J. Purvis of Youngstown's Memorial Presbyterian church read from the Scriptures. The coffin was closed, and Miss Campbell did not see her mother's body.

Mrs. Campbell, 55, daughter-in-law of a pioneer Ohio steel master, James A. Campbell, died Sunday of internal hemorrhages induced by an abdominal wound, despite a blood transfusion from her daughter.

Witnesses Agree. The verdict of the coroner's inquest said:

"All the witnesses in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Cordelia Campbell were thoroughly examined by Coroner J. C. Henshaw, and they all stated that the shooting was accidental."

"Also a statement was made by Mrs. Campbell before she expired that it was an accident."

The order for the release of the young woman gave her the opportunity to attend private funeral services for her mother at a Youngstown funeral home.

A close guard had been placed over the blond, handsome girl last night after her counsel said she "wanted to die."

Her face drawn and tear-stained, Miss Campbell related at an inquest yesterday her story of a happy gathering which progressed from eggnogs and tree decorating to gunfire and death. The small blond, dressed in black, left the jail for the first time since early Christmas morning. She is held without charge.

Prosecutor Paul J. Reagan said there was "not much variance in the testimony given by Miss Campbell and that offered by the other witnesses." Guests at the home told the prosecutor Mrs. Campbell was shot accidentally when she attempted to take a gun from her daughter.

"Miss Campbell told us," Reagan said, "that she had perhaps two-and-a-half glasses of (Continued on Page 7, Col. 3)

Grand Jury Probing Parole System Here Today.

The special grand jury investigating alleged parole irregularities in Franklin county arrived at the Mansfield reformatory today for an informal visit at noon today.

The panel, summoned in Columbus, will not study the institution records. Supt. Arthur L. Glatke pointed out that this investigation is to be made by a special jury Duffy has indicated he will call here late in January.

Relief Threatens New Attempt to Balance U. S. Budget

NEEDY AID TO FORM DEBATE IN CONGRESS

Roosevelt's Message Expected to Predict Possibilities of Balanced Spending.

WASHINGTON—Usually well-informed officials said today President Roosevelt would tell Congress next week that the 1938-39 budget can be balanced if relief expenditures can be held within bounds.

The budget which he will send to Capitol Hill Jan. 4 is not expected to contain a definite relief estimate. Because of uncertainty about the severity and duration of the current business recession, the president probably will give only a tentative figure.

See Cost Too High.

Some members of Congress have expressed the opinion relief costs will run so high that a balance between federal income and outgo cannot be reached.

Treasury officials, however, indicated that expenditures for other items than relief and national defense would be sliced liberally in an attempt to bring about a balance.

Government spending will constitute one of the principal subjects before the session of Congress which meets next Monday.

One experienced member predicted Congress would be kept in session by controversial topics, at least until mid-June despite the "spade work" accomplished at the recent special session.

An item which most congressmen believe will be added to the administration program is new anti-trust legislation. President Roosevelt originally placed it on the special session agenda, but offered no specific proposals.

Before Congress can debate an anti-monopoly program, it must deal with such complicated and controversial subjects as farm control, anti-lynching, government reorganization and taxation.

Works On Tax Bill.

The house ways and means committee is expected soon to finish a bill to revise the federal tax structure, placing particular emphasis on the corporate surplus and capital gains levies.

In the senate, anti-lynching legislation already approved by the house will have the right-of-way. It will be followed, under present plans, by the bitterly-opposed government reorganization bill.

Other proposals, either on the administration program or strongly backed by members, include: Creation of seven regional planning authorities; Revision of the Wagner labor act; Curtailment of road appropriations; Wage-hour and child labor legislation.

Up and Down THE STREET

The Richland County Automobile club has a problem on its hands. One of the thousands of license plates issued at the office this year, they have the records of all but one. The lone exception is license VW-425, issued May 24. The owner paid for them, but in addition to taking the plates, he also received the original and carbon copy of the license application and certificate by mistake. The only way the state has of knowing to whom the license was issued. The auto club wants the records so it can wind up its books for the year and so the driver can be registered with the state bureau of motor vehicles.

Louis J. Ott, Ohio Brass advertising manager, isn't very strong for this "backyard, turn backward, oh time in your flight" stuff, because it brings complications. In a recent issue of The News-Journal, the "Twenty Years Ago Today" column announced that Louis Ott had started in the rabbit business and on Christmas day a pair of rabbits arrived at his home as a gift—to remind him of his childhood business venture.

At least one red-breasted robin likes Ohio winters better than the warmer times, for he has remained behind the migratory flocks to sing his lilting song to residents on West Fifth street. Mrs. Lona Palmer, 97 West Fifth street, reports the bird sat in the bare branches of her elm tree Christmas morning and sang a carol that was a happy. Even the noisy sparrows stopped their chattering long enough to listen.

Sheriff E. P. Long has a new definition for the meanest man in the world. "He's the fellow who sent me those popcorn balls for Christmas," commented the sheriff who just had all his upper teeth extracted and finds it difficult enough to eat soup, to say nothing of popcorn. His deputies came to the rescue, though, and most of the popcorn had been consumed today.

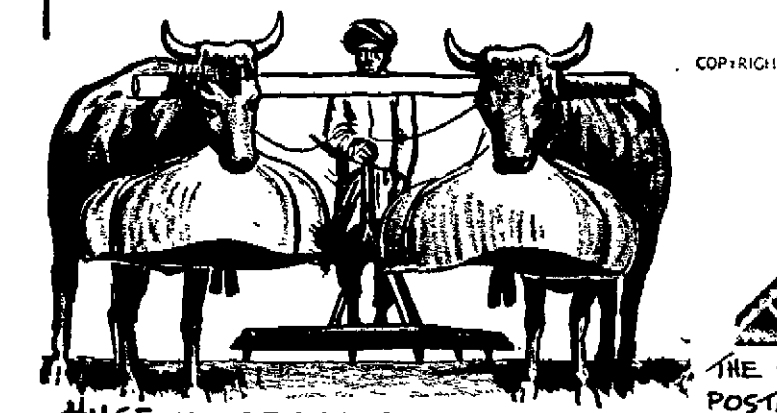

Ohio is vying with Florida for the winter residence of one Mansfielder, and holding its own, too. Of course, the southern state is warmer than Mansfield, but it has not been cold enough yet to set Jack Collins, the person in question, flying to Florida. If the temperature should suddenly drop, however, Collins, golf professional at Westbrook Country club, can be expected to head Florida-way, where, in addition to absorbing some of the Florida heat, he can get in a few tune-up swings for the next golf season.

CITY PAYS ON OLD TAX DEBT

$236 Charged Against Waterworks Department Turned Over to County.

The settlement of the city's 17-year-old tax debt to the county was one more step closer to realization today with the payment of $236.77 — the amount charged against the waterworks department of the $3,500 owed for special assessments.

The balance of $3,330.59 is to be paid in nine annual installments of $370.07. It will be deducted from the annual tax settlements due the city from the county.

City Auditor Paul Kelley said a check for the amount of the assessment chargeable against the waterworks had been forwarded to the county. The city, however, has not yet received a settlement from the county on the amount that is owed in sewer and water rental delinquencies, Kelley said.

The plan for settlement of the debt was worked out by city and county officials on Dec. 19, the last day that the Whittemore act, allowing payment of delinquent taxes on the installment plan without interest or penalty, was in force.

Council at a special meeting Dec. 21, authorized the settlement plan and appropriated the funds from the waterworks department for the payment of $236.

RAVEL, FAMOUS COMPOSER, DIES IN PARIS FOLLOWING OPERATION

PARIS—(AP)—Maurice Ravel, international famous composer, died today.

Ravel, 62, was one of the foremost living composers. Such of his works as Daphnis and Chloe, The Bolero, Le Tombeau de Couperin and others were familiar throughout the world.

He was taken to a hospital last week for an operation to combat an ailment which made it difficult for him to write or otherwise use his hands. He showed much improvement at first but took a grave turn for the worse Sunday.

His last major work was a concerto for the left hand, written several years ago.

Flautist and composer, Ravel was born at Ciboure, near Biarritz, at 12 he began the serious study of the piano and soon showed such rapid and comprehensive progress that his career was established.

At the Paris conservatoire, Ravel took a course in harmony under Pessard, studied counterpoint and fugue with Gedeze and then became a pupil in composition of Gabriel Faure.

At this time Ravel's marked originality in composition became manifest. In 1903 he decided to try for the prix de Rome. He set the poem Myrrha to music and gave it extremely light treatment. When it came to be judged, Charles Lenepveu, member of the institute, protested:

"M. Ravel has the right to take us for firemen, but not for imbeciles!"

Ravel continued his work with zeal, but in semi-seclusion, after such attacks as this. However, some newspapers and musical publications began to champion him. The director of the conservatoire resigned and Gabriel Faure, Ravel's old teacher, succeeded.

Ravel's martyrdom ended promptly his fame spread rapidly and his popularity became universal.

His first important work was "Les Sites Auriculaires."

WIFE BELIEVES WEIRD STORY OF CHILD'S DEATH

Husband Says Supernatural Visit by Dead Father Prompted Murder.

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis.—(AP)—The 15-year-old wife of Henry Nead, 19, a farm laborer, calmly accepted today her husband's explanation that he killed her baby son because he was goaded by a super-natural visitation of his dead father.

The weird story was uncovered in the tiny village of Vesper west of here. The baby, six weeks old, died from a beating administered early Christmas morning. Nead married his child bride, Luella, last June although aware that he was not the father of her unborn child, he said.

The couple first told officers the child's head was crushed by a fall in their home. Nead changed his story yesterday and said he had a "confession."

Said Nead "Come Back."

"My father died six years ago," he told Sheriff Henry Becker. "He always denied he was my father. He said he'd come back and cause me trouble."

Christmas morning, he said, he was awakened by three knocks on the bottom of the door.

"I opened it and it was the ghost."

The spirit threatened him unless he placated by the blood of the child, he said.

"Everything went black then and when I came to I knew the baby was dead. My father even made me tell about it," he said.

The young wife and the youth's mother said they had heard the knocks at the door.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENI

The White House Riddle.

THE EXTRA SESSION of Congress having ended in almost complete futility, interest is now centered upon the regular session to open in a few days and with much longer to run. The extent to which, just a year ago, they were mistaken about the last regular session has engendered a certain amount of caution among the professional forecasters concerning this one.

Only the very rash venture to predict. Prudent persons, however well posted, content themselves with stating a few quite obvious facts. Clearly, one of these is that what the Congress does depends upon the quality and character of the White House leadership. Or at least so it seems. Certainly that was what everybody thought in January, 1937, and yet Congress did not follow the president's lead. On the contrary, it killed the court-packing bill, dear to his heart; emasculated and sidetracked his department reorganization bill, which would have put all the independent commissions under executive control. In brief, the president's program transformed what seemed a docile and well-disciplined Congress into a sensationalist recalcitrant one. It astonishingly resisted the full weight of the White House and refused response to the administration whip. In the extra session called by the president for the specific purpose of enacting wage and hour and crop-control bills, Mr. Roosevelt adopted a different strategy but got about the same results.

UP TO A short time ago, there was sound ground for believing that Mr. Roosevelt wanted and intended to urge at this session a conservative course, calculated to restore business confidence and recover national solvency. His own words gave evidence of this. He seemed sincerely determined upon economy and budget balancing. He favored tax revision. He expressed a desire for business cooperation. He conferred with business leaders and held peace talks with the harassed public utility executives. His cabinet aids—Morgenthau, Roper and others—spoke out strongly along these lines.

BUT today there are many who believe the president is preparing again to kick business in the face rather than pat it on the back. These points to the recent lectures by spokesmen to business men for calling names, when no names had been called. They point to the fantastic effort to inculcate the idea that the business slump is the result of a conspiracy upon the part of business leaders to "get" Mr. Roosevelt. They point to the recent White House conferences of radical senators, who favor renewed spending and more taxes—senators close and more influential with the president than his own party leaders. Finally, they point to Mr. Roosevelt's attack upon the press and to the speech of Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson, denouncing "Big Business," and a m. a. 2 the slump upon it and threatening increased taxation and regulation.

THE NET of all this is complete uncertainty. There are still those who believe the president's trend is toward conciliation and that his efforts to retrench will not be repeated. On the other hand, his left wing friends are convinced that in his message on Jan. 3 will indict Congress for its failures; that on Jan. 8—Jackson day—he will assail business for "refusal to co-operate," and later, in a radio "fireside talk," make what they call a "lightning speech" denunciation of all anti-New Dealers and declaring his purpose to proceed on the New Deal lines, advised by such unusual men as Mr. Levis Henderson and Mr. Isador Lubin. In brief, the president's purpose is too uncertain.

Hollywood Speaks—

HOLLYWOOD—At a time when practically everybody concerned is busily regretting a certain broadcast, it is pleasant to report there should be few regrets about Mae West's new picture.

"Every Day's a Holiday" puts Mae—much slimmer, better photographed than ever—back where she belongs. In hour-glass gowns, as a pouting personality, very cute and engaging.

"Love and Hises" carries on the Ben Bernie-Walter Winchell feud, against the thousands of West Point and the mythical kingdom of Romania. Produced and written by William Anthony McGuire, who did it on the stage at Ziegfeld, "Rosalie" would have started that great showman with its opulence and beauty in settings, dance and song.

After "The Bride Wore Red," any film would mark an improvement. In "Love and Hises," a story by Arthur Arthur, in which Simone plays Yvette Yvette. Despite all this double talk, Simone's singing is her own, not a double's. When Simone takes a stab at "Lakme," no one fears for Lily Pons—but this is not meant disparagingly to a voice that until recently was not even known to exist. Simone's singing is good enough that many in the preview audience doubted it was her own, but also interesting is the little French pointer's emergence.

—Advice—
Can Boy Love A Picture?

By VIRGINIA LEE
"CAN A MAN love a woman he has never seen?" I am asked. He can love what he thinks she is—an ideal. It has been done many times. It is not the usual custom, of course, but men have fallen in love with women's pictures, and women have fallen in love with men's portraits.

If you have had the good fortune to see Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina," you saw a young woman who fell in love with a man's picture, and when she saw him in person she loved him still more, and they were married and were most devoted lovers until his death.

This is DOLLY's problem. She has been corresponding with a boy for a long time, but they have never seen each other except in pictures. She will meet him some time in the future, however. He tells her he loves her. She wonders whether it is possible, when he has never seen her.

The boy is in love with his idea of you, dear. When you meet he will get to know the girl he has been picturing to himself all this time. He does know you quite well through your letters, of course, for a letter is a very revealing thing.

The difference in your religion is something serious to consider if you find you like each other well after you have met. It is a problem, which, as I have said a good many times in this column, can only be worked out with love, understanding and sympathy each for the other. Good luck to you, Dolly. You are both very young, you know, and can afford to wait a while before being very serious in your friendship.

L. D. is 15 and her problem is that she is alone too much. She goes to high school and has friends there, but they do not live near her and so she is not included in their parties or asked to go places with them. School is the only time she has any fun, she says.

Her family is very nice, and her mother wants her to have a good time, but there is no fun in going to the movies or to the park alone, she says.

Well, dear, you cannot very well change the circumstances of your life at present. You have to live where it is convenient for your family. So if you can't have what you like—which is young companionship—you must "like what you can have," and make companions of the members of your family and older or younger people who live near enough to you to go out with you. You do not explain why you live away from your friends, and if you have neighbors with whom you could be pals.

Why not make a pal of your mother and dad, if you have no brothers or sisters? There will be years and years ahead when you will have other friends and a different life, so enjoy your family's companionship while you can.

B. S.: Your letter reached me too late if you wanted an answer for Thanksgiving, my dear. But I think you are right in insisting that your boy friend should not make too much of his lack of funds. It is natural, however, that his girl should suffer if he has no money to take you out. Don't tease him to come to see you when he feels as he does, but when you are with him and in your letters, always take the point of view that he is much more important to you than money could possibly be. It will cheer and help him, whether he admits it or not.

Last year a boy in school asked SHERRY repeatedly for dates. She did not know him very well, so refused. Now he speaks, but asks her for no more dates, but she would love to go with him. She thinks he still likes her.

You can make a point of being very friendly to him, Sherry, so as to let him know that you like him now. Maybe he will then ask you for another date and this time you can accept.

If it is necessary to keep articles of food warm, place the dishes containing them into dishes of lukewarm water.

In gathering material for Christmas wreaths do not pull or break off evergreen boughs. Prune them with a sharp shears, as breaking branches permit decay to enter.

Hand Beauty Comes With Exercise

—Beauty—
By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"
"HER HANDS were fragile flowers, pale as petals, soft as blossoms." In the days of Queen Victoria, this line aptly described the ideal feminine hand of that era: a hand soft, delicate and pretty, but completely useless! Nowadays, the ideal hand is a trifle too capable, too full of character and expression to fit this picture. Hands today combine capability with charm. And they are expressive and graceful as well as soft and lovely.

Many girls today have strong, capable hands, but because of the work they do in many lines, their fingers must, of necessity, be nimble and flexible. Yet hands still possess the lovely, flower-like quality that distinguished the hands of the Victorian damsels.

This fragile, flower-like quality is undoubtedly due in part to the grace and expressiveness of modern women's hands, but it is also due to the soft, colorful polishes that are used on the nails. Such polishes throw the hands into soft relief and, by contrast, make them delicate and transparent.

Nail polishes in flower tones are the newest vogue for fingers. These flower shades have just soft, glowing color to give the hands a fragile appeal. Fashions for winter demand this delicate look, and no matter how workaday your hands may be, the new shades will help them back to femininity.

Hands Create Charm.

Hands play a very important role in creating charm. People often look at a girl's hands—men do, in particular—when a new person presents them from staring at her face. Few of us, it seems to me, realize how literally our "fate is in our hands." For if we did, we would give them as much time and care as do professional people, who depend on them to so large an extent for their bread and butter.

Hand beauty, of course, does not rely upon nail polish shades alone. So if you're going to adopt those new flower shades for use this season, make sure that your hands are appropriately soft and delicate. And try to cultivate expressiveness in them, too.

If you wish to soften and improve the texture of your hands, try using hand cream in addition to your skin balm. Use your lotion or balm during the day, and your cream at night. It is well to use both these preparations regularly at this time of the year, for the skin is just recovering from the ravages of the summer sun, and exposure to cold threatens them.

As for expressiveness, a few simple exercises will work wonders to improve the grace of the hands. An expert in hand culture recommends two exercises in particular for this purpose. One is called the Swan. To execute this, bend the hand backward at the wrist, holding the fingers back as far as possible. Dip the fingers down and move the hand forward, continuing the motion. Move the fingers back, and follow through with the wrist. Repeat with each hand ten times.

The second exercise recommended is called the Merry-go-round. In this the wrist is held still—use the opposite hand to hold it, if you wish—and the hand is swung around in circles from the wrist, first clockwise, then counter-clockwise. It will take only a moment to repeat these exercises each night, but they will help amazingly to give your hands the grace and charm which add so much to your total attractiveness.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON
Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Had I heard Dicky right? Was he actually asking me why I did not leave for the city as soon as Mary's apartment was ready, he who is always raising objections to my being away from home?

But I knew better than to question his query. Instead, I made a purposely lazy answer.

No reason in all the world," I drawled. "Mary and I can go in any day. I just thought I'd like to be home when the youngsters and Katherine arrive."

"But they're not coming for another week," Dicky objected. "Couldn't we come out the day they get here?"

I put down my increasing amazement with an iron hand, and brought under the same restriction my natural housewifely desire to see personally that everything was in readiness for the homecoming of my children.

"Of course, I could," I told him quickly. "And I'm sure it doesn't matter in the least to Mary whether she is in the city or at the farm, as long as Noel isn't with her. Let me think! I'll do all my own packing and planning tomorrow—Noel and Mary won't need any attention save their meals, which are in Katie's hands. Day after tomorrow, I shall have to devote to Mary. She'll be terribly upset after Noel leaves, and I shall have to help her with her packing—all her things are here, you know—but the day after that, we can move to the city, if you wish."

I could not resist the three last words. I was entitled to them, I thought. I had asked no question, and from beneath my eyelashes I watched furtively for his reaction to them.

He did not start—his nerves and muscles are too well disciplined for that—but I was conscious of the quick questioning flash of his eyes. Then, to my amusement, he laughed and answered:

"Do you think in all these years," he drawled, "that I haven't caught on to that charming trick of yours of watching people from beneath your incredibly long and beautiful eyelashes? But I'll fall for both trick and adroitly-worded question. I do wish that you'd move into Mary's apartment as soon as possible, and come out here, or go anywhere else as few days as possible for the next month or two."

He stopped, and our eyes clashed. Did he expect a question? I resolved that he would not get it. If he wished to explain this mysterious wish of his, I was ready and willing—may anxious—to hear it. But I would not lift the traditional finger to invite it.

"I can't tell you why I wish this just now. I hope I'll never have to, and that I'm just imagining things, but if I have to call on you for 'first aid to the injured,' I will 'tell you all' before I ask any service of you. However, that is beside the question. I ought to be in the city this very minute, but I'm not going until you are within reaching distance, as it were, so I can get hold of you at a minute's notice."

My mystification increased by the second, and with it came the remembrance of Edith Fairfax's letter, seemingly the product of a mind not quite balanced with its maundering about Dicky being "in a jam."

I had turned that letter — and Edith—over to Lillian for management, at her demand, with Dicky's subsequent approval. Suddenly there swept over me a nostalgic longing for Lillian's strong brain and spirit. But it would be more than a week before I could see her, for she had to settle Marion in college before tackling the exciting job of bringing the royal refugees to the sanctuary of the farmhouse.

I was conscious that Dicky was waiting for some comment from me, and I said hastily and earnestly, "I'll be in readiness at any minute for any service you may wish of me," then added anxiously, "but with both of us gone, Mother will be alone in the house with Jim and Katie. Father has been here this summer, you know."

"That's true," Dicky said worriedly, "and they sleep off in that wing, where they couldn't hear her unless she rang their bell, and she's just stubborn enough not to do that. But—I've just got to have you in the city."

Advice For Tipping On Steamers

—Etiquet—
By EMILY POST
Dear Mrs. Post: Some months ago you printed several articles which included the recommended amounts for tipping on transatlantic liners and cruise ships. I meant to clip that list as I often do the things I feel that I may want to refer to some day, but didn't. Now I would like to have it very much. Will you consider reprinting as much of it as you feel essential for the inexperienced traveler on present-day ships?

Answer: I have no copy of the list you ask for but the following is taken from one of the tipping lists in the new revised edition of my book:

Cabin steward: If occupying average cabin class accommodations on a biggest and fastest deluxe transatlantic steamship, a man should give five dollars; a woman divides the amount between steward and stewardess, or if considerable service was exacted of stewardess, she gets five dollars.

Dining room steward receives five dollars; his assistant two and a half and possibly three. In a first restaurant you tip ten per cent of your bill at the end of the voyage, or fifteen per cent if your bill is small.

Deck steward gets two to five dollars, depending upon service. If you take many meals on deck, tip steward who brought them to you at least five dollars. (You give nothing to the chief dining steward unless he was especially attentive, nor send a chef anything unless he prepared special dishes for you.)

Smoking room steward is given from ten cents to a quarter at the time you order anything from him, or if he presents his bill at the end of the voyage you tip him about as you would have at separate times—between fifteen and twenty per cent. If you bought only cigarettes or cigars at the counter you add ten per cent to his bill.

Dining table wine steward gets ten per cent of the amount on the bill.

Bath steward gets a dollar.

On a slower boat on which fare is a third less, tips are reduced in proportion of three dollars in place of five.

Going to Bermuda on the highest class ship tip would be two dollars in place of five, and smaller amounts in proportion.

On an eighteen-day cruise tips would be double your first class Atlantic crossing.

The more luxurious accommodations the proportionately higher your tips. Eight per cent of your passage money is about right for a cabin passenger. Tourist class, five per cent is enough.

ONION SAUCE—Follow the recipe for white sauce. Cook one Bermuda onion, finely chopped, with the butter for three minutes.

LEMON BETTER SAUCE—One-fourth cup butter, one tablespoon lemon juice. Cream butter and add the lemon juice slowly.

BETTER TO THINK FIRST

It would be interesting to know just how many contracts are lost because of an improper play from the dummy on the very first trick. Many declarers do the obvious without thinking and then later realize they should have done something else. But by the time that information comes, the beans are spilled.

Find out how he could enter the dummy four times. This could be accomplished only by trumping the first spade lead in the dummy and trying the heart finesse. The second high spade would have provided another entry to the dummy for another heart finesse. The play of the ace would then have cleared that suit.

After the leads of the clubs K and Q, with each opponent following, the club J could safely be overtaken with dummy's A to provide one lead of the diamond suit. With this proving successful, the club 2 to the 7 would furnish another entry for a second diamond lead.

Tomorrow's Problem.

North and South landed in a contract of 6-Hearts on this deal. South started with 2-Hearts, North raised to three and South jumped to six.

When the spade Q was led the declarer discarded a diamond from dummy and won in the South hand with the K. The club 2 to the A in dummy furnished an entry for a heart finesse, which was successful. Full South now laid down the heart A, hoping the K was a doubton, but it failed to drop. So a trick was lost to the heart K and a later one to the diamond K.

Declarer's first objective when the opening lead was made was to

Horoscope

For Wednesday, Dec. 29.

Much sturdy progress should be made on this day in the way of solidifying the fortunes and interests, judging by the lunar aspects. Old and lagging projects may receive definite spur, with elders or old established institutions ready to assist in such security of finances and property interests, as well as in putting the social position upon a sounder basis.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which they may be able to feel solid ground under their feet after a period of depression or inertia.

A child born on this day may be studious, deep, steadfast and industrious, with energy and enterprise for putting over solid propositions and carving out a place of security in business and in his personal life. Elders should be disposed to assist in this.

My Neighbor Says:

Low growing junipers, small cedars, pines and spruce trees may be planted in outside window box and will grow well during the winter. But evergreens give off water all winter, so you must keep them watered just as you water summer boxes if you wish to have them grow.

Bacon should always be cooked slowly as a high temperature causes it to smoke and smoking fat is burning fat. Pour off fat as it accumulates. Ham and sausages are also better cooked at a low temperature.

RECORD RAINS DELUGED OHIO DURING 1937

Storms, Minor Earthquakes Recorded For 12 Months of Unusual Weather.

By REED D. SMITH
COLUMBUS — (AP) — Ohioans looked back on 1937 as one of the wettest years on record.

The year began with mild temperatures and phenomenal rains, ascribed by State Meteorologist J. C. Fisher as the direct cause of the disastrous January Ohio river flood and lesser inundations over the state.

Hail, sleet, storms of tornado-like proportions and two minor earthquakes added material during the year for the ever recurring topic of conversation—the weather.

Unusually mild temperatures were recorded in February, but wet weather delayed spring plowing and planting and hampered the fall wheat harvest. Corn was one of the few crops which thrived.

Fall temperatures were described by Fisher as generally above normal.

January rainfall for the state averaged 9.42 inches, the largest amount for any month since September, 1869, when the average was 9.67 inches. The 1936 January average was 1.65 inches.

Warmest January.

With but four exceptions, January, 1937, also was the warmest initial month. The average temperature was 35.9 degrees compared with the 1936 January average of 32.6 degrees.

The phenomenal January precipitation, following heavy rains the last five days of December, 1936, naturally resulted in floods," Fisher explained. "Flood stages on the Ohio river tributaries such as the Muskingum, Hocking and Scioto were generally reached by the middle of the month and maintained until near the close."

A mild February left rivers and lakes comparatively free of ice, the Toledo weather bureau reported that the steamer E. C. Pope arrived light from Detroit, Mich., opening navigation on Lake Erie earlier than at any time since records were started in 1831. The steamer loaded and started back the following day.

March was unusually dry, only five such months having less precipitation recorded since records began in 1888. Fisher noted two slight earthquakes during the month, one on the 2nd or about 15 seconds duration and another on the 9th. The tremors caused damage in the vicinity of Anna, Ohio.

April precipitation was considerably above normal and storms during May caused heavy damage in the northern part of the state. Especially in the vicinity of Toledo, Niles and Youngstown.

June's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

July's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

August's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

September's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

October's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

November's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

December's average rainfall of 6.97 inches was the fourth highest monthly average that has been recorded thus far. In that month Sandusky recorded the greatest 24-hour rainfall for the state, 5.95 inches on the 24-25th. Underground streams backed up, flooded Bellevue and vicinity. A tornado-like storm ripped across the southeastern section of Ohio on the 21st and 22nd, and northern sections caused damage estimated by Fisher in excess of $1,000,000.

LIST LEADERS EXTEND LOSSES IN EARLY MART

Extreme Declines Are Reduced When Support Appears Near Second Hour.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Steels took another tumble in today's stock market and many leaders extended Monday's declines fractions to 3 points.

A little support appeared after a sharp opening sell-off and extreme declines were reduced near the second hour. Activity was moderate.

Mild resistance was displayed by aircrafts, utilities and scattered rails.

Year-end tax selling continued as a recovery obstacle and Wall Street seemingly was still depressed by fears the rift between big business and the administration may be growing. Bonds were lower and commodities mixed.

Despite another batch of sour November railway income statements, some transportation observers apparently found arguments to support holders of carrier shares.

These pointed to a prospective freight rate increase, a generally sympathetic attitude on the part of the interstate commerce commission and the administration, the likelihood that make-work bills will be sidetracked in congress, and a healthier competitive situation than existed at the bottom of the depression. Chances of further extension of credit by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. were also thought to be good.

FASCISTS STILL HOLDING OUT IN 2 STRONGHOLDS

But Loyalists Claim Firing From Burning Buildings Grows Weaker.

HENDAYE, FRENCH-SPANISH FRONTIER.—(AP)—Spanish loyalists asserted today that the nationalist defenders of Teruel were weakening, and that the collapse of resistance, narrowed now to two small groups of buildings, might be expected at any time.

Both the seminary and the Bank of Spain building, the principal centers of resistance, were burning slowly and the loyalists asserted that fire from the buildings was decreasing noticeably in intensity.

Loyalists insisted that two nationalist relief columns on their way to Teruel were making absolutely no progress and that the nationalists were not even replying to appeals for help radioed by the defenders.

Nationalists, on the contrary, reported steady progress by the relief columns—which were said several days ago to be "within sight" of Teruel—and said they were inflicting severe losses on the loyalists outside the city.

Further the nationalists asserted they were beginning a turning movement against the loyalist right wing north of Teruel and that, if the movement succeeded, the loyalists would not only be thrown out on Teruel but would be thrown back beyond the point at which they started their recent drive for the city.

Every effort to persuade the defenders of the seminary and the Bank of Spain building to surrender failed. The loyalists stopped a heavy artillery bombardment to send two priests to the defenders to discuss a "surrender" terms. The priests returned to say that the nationalists refused to surrender on terms, had sufficient water and food as well as munitions and were confident they could hold out until relief arrived.

It seemed possible that interest might be shifted to a new battle zone within a few days. Possibly to embarrass nationalist efforts to relieve Teruel, but possibly also as the prelude to a new big drive, loyalists began an offensive yesterday between Zaragoza and Huesca, the great nationalist base north of the Teruel zone.

Loyalist advisers were that the nationalists were taken by surprise and lost several positions of importance in the Alcañiz range of mountains north of Zaragoza.

In charge of the services were Bishop Warren Lincoln Rogers of the Ohio Episcopal diocese and Dr. Chester B. Emerson, dean of the cathedral.

SHOOTSELF IN MURDER INQUIRY

Musician Near Death as Police Probe Mother's Slaying.

MUNCIE, Ind.—(AP)—Jesse Nixon, 52, former cornetist with Philip Sousa's band, lay at the point of death in a hospital here today while police investigated the ax murder of his mother, Mrs. Phoebe Nixon, 72.

Police, who asked that their names be withheld, said Nixon shot himself in the head when they went to his home yesterday to question him about the slaying of his mother.

The officers quoted Nixon as saying in a statement he had planned to kill his mother for four years because she insisted that he return home each time he left the city with a band or orchestra.

MAKES APPEAL FOR YULE SEALS

Chairman of City Campaign Urges Mansfielders to Mail Checks.

"Mail those Christmas seal checks!"

That appeal went forth to Mansfielders today from George H. Smith, chairman of the city Christmas Seal sale, as he checked up on the results of the campaign, funds of which will be used to combat tuberculosis in Richland county.

About 200 individuals have not yet returned checks for the seal sale, Smith said, urging them to do so in order that the campaign books may be closed.

With the city's quota set at $2,700, about $2,000 has already been received, Smith said, and a considerable amount of money is due from firms which customarily mail checks at the end of the month.

"If those individuals who have not yet sent in their checks will do so, I'm sure we'll go over the quota," Smith said.

In Shelby, where the quota was $350, the Seal sale has brought in about $550, Smith said. Mrs. C. C. Brokaw was chairman of the county-wide drive.

WOOD TO FIGHT NLRB DECISION

Ford Retains Lawyer Who Won In NRA Test Case.

DETROIT—(AP)—Frederick H. Wood, New York attorney who has fought and defended important New Deal legislation successfully, will direct the Ford Motor company legal forces in an attempt to prevail against the national labor relations board.

Wood was counsel for H. L. A. Schechter Poultry corporation in the case leading to the invalidation of the national recovery act and also argued against the subsequently overthrown Guffey law which provided for a "little NRA" in the soft coal industry.

Earlier he worked with Stanley F. Reed, United States solicitor general.

Heflin Stricken With Pneumonia Week Before Election.

LAFAYETTE, Ala.—(AP)—Lobar pneumonia kept former Senator J. Thomas Heflin abed at a hospital here today, just a week from the date of the primary election he hopes will return him to Washington.

Dr. N. A. Wheeler and Dr. W. D. Gaines, attending physicians, said the former senator was a "very sick man" but Dr. Gaines said he would be able to vote next week.

AUTOIST HURT

Suffers Skull Injury as Car Overtakes Near Lucas.

Ray Snook, 47, R. D. 4, Mansfield, was in General hospital today suffering with a possible skull fracture, sustained Monday afternoon when the car he was driving overturned on route 39, two miles south of Lucas, after failing to make a curve in the road.

Snook was unconscious when taken to the hospital yesterday afternoon, but regained consciousness later. The full extent of his injuries will not be known until an X-ray has been taken, his physician said.

State Highway Patrolman L. A. Alexander said he learned Snook was traveling on the left side of the road, and when he reached the curve at the top of the hill, the car ran off the right side of the road, up an embankment and then overturned.

BUST THAT COLD WIDE OPEN Don't Merely Humor It!

Deal with a cold in earnest. Deal with it in seriousness.

A cold is too fraught with danger to be taken lightly. Many a case of flu and pneumonia has started with nothing more than a "common cold."

Treat a cold for what it is—an internal infection. Therefore, internal treatment.

Treat a cold with a preparation made for colds and not a "cure-all."

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets) are what you want. They are made expressly for the treatment of colds and not for all kinds of ailments.

They are internal in effect and do four important things.

First, they open the bowels.

Second, they check the infection in the system.

Third, they relieve the headache and fever.

Fourth, they tone the system and help fortify against further attack.

Bromo Quinine tablets are a proven preparation. They have been on the market over 40 years and are the world's largest-selling cold tablet.

Bromo Quinine tablets now come sugar-coated as well as plain. Both kinds are sold by all druggists, a few cents a box.

STUDENTS WILL 'REIGN' FOR DAY AT SENIOR HIGH

Pupils Chosen by Popular Vote to Conduct Classes and Operate School.

The students of Mansfield Senior high school will take over complete operation of the school for one day during January, Principal Jesse Beer said today.

Students will act as the principal, assistant principal and teachers of all the classes. Beer said Faculty members will attend school as visitors and will visit classes other than their own, for the purpose of studying the co-operation between the students and the student leaders, Beer explained.

Chosen by Vote.

Students chosen as faculty members and school officials for the day will be selected by popular vote. Each class will vote from its membership for a student to act as teacher on the day. No students will be allowed to act as teacher in more than one class.

The two pupils who will act as principal and assistant principal will be chosen by popular vote of the entire student body.

Arrangements for the "all-student day" are in charge of a committee of teachers and students named by Principal Beer. The committee includes Miss Margaret Clapsdell, Miss Kathleen Mendenhall, J. C. Stout, and H. D. Bishop of the faculty. William Fishback, Richard Donnan, Mildred Miller, Joan Balliett, and Fred Hanson of the student body.

The date for the event will be set later.

CITIES RAISE $61,000,000

Community Fund Campaigns Carried on In 311 of Nation's Cities.

NEW YORK (AP)—A total of $61,000,000 has been raised through community chest drives in 311 cities, Charles F. Taft, chairman of the community mobilization for human needs has announced. Approximately $22,000,000 is expected to be added to this sum from 155 campaigns in other cities.

The total number of contributions, Taft said, is expected to reach 9,000,000 in the United States and Canada. The fund will be administered by about 8,500 private philanthropic and social service groups in 1938.

Announcing that the campaigns to date had raised three per cent more money than in 1936, Taft said:

"This increase, made in the face of a falling market and distributed labor conditions, is a triumph of community spirit."

He pointed out, however, that the sum was small compared to the total amount needed throughout the country.

ORDERED TO PAY

Autoist Denied New Trial In $3,000 Damage Case.

The defense motion for a new trial in the $3,000 damage suit against M. E. Eckman of Cleveland had been overruled today in common pleas court and Eckman was ordered to pay $3,000 damages to Miss Ruth Schaaf of near Lexington.

Miss Schaaf was awarded that amount several weeks ago by a common pleas court jury after a second trial of the case. Eckman, driver of the car in which Miss Schaaf was injured in July, 1935, lost a $1,300 verdict 18 months ago and then won a new trial.

Miss Schaaf lost her front teeth when Eckman's car crashed into a bridge near Lexington after, she said, he took his hands from the steering wheel in an attempt to put his arms around her.

Going to Land of Sunshine? Auto Club Maps Route

Are you getting ready to absorb a little sunshine and fuses this land of snow and ice? If you are, the Richland County Automobile club has some suggestions for those who plan to drive.

Frank Beverstock, club secretary, has mapped a route to Florida which he considers not only the shortest but the best because it avoids mountainous country and which at present has no detours.

He suggests that motorists going from this vicinity take U. S. 42 into Cincinnati, then U. S. 25 to Lexington, Ky. U. S. 27 to Chattanooga, Tenn. U. S. 41 through Atlanta to Barnesville, Ga., Georgia state route 7 to Perry, Ga., and then back onto U. S. 41 into St. Petersburg or Tampa.

Beverstock said the distance is 1,175 over all improved highways. Four points on the east coast, he said, the motorist should leave U. S. 41 at Perry and follow U. S. 741 to Raxley and then proceed south on U. S. 1.

BOOM RETURNING TO VIEUX CARRE

Oldest Area of New Orleans Becomes Fast-Growing Residential Section.

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Vieux Carre, oldest section of New Orleans, is the fastest-growing residential area of the city.

The old French Quarter, site of the founding of New Orleans by Bienville in 1718, is in the midst of a miniature boom after more than 200 years of ups and downs.

Prosperity that it hasn't known in decades is spreading through every part of the section.

A survey reveals that remodeling and renovation operations are being conducted on a larger scale than at any time since the city was laid out. This section of New Orleans is eight blocks square fronting the Mississippi river below Canal street.

Although many landlords report waiting lists for their accommodations, rents are low, adding to the Quarter's desirability as a dwelling place for low-salaried young couples who like its charm and the old world atmosphere.

A few brave persons started the movement to the Vieux Carre not so many years ago, when it was not considered safe for an unescorted woman to walk through its dark and narrow European-like streets.

Writers like Lyle Saxon and Roark Bradford, artists, newspapermen and others interested in preserving the historic section, fought filth and squalor and gradually they brightened up the Quarter.

Others followed. To the Quarter today are moving Orleansians who formerly lived in the Uptown Garden district—university professors, business men and students.

EAGLE LOSES FIGHT WITH 6

SHERIDAN, Wyo.—(AP)—It took six men to capture the eagle Dr. I. F. Hayes wounded near here.

The doctor was hunting pheasants when he saw the eagle shot twice at it. The bird fell, stunned, but was up on his feet and trying to run when Dr. Hayes and his five hunting companions overtook him.

They tied his feet and wings and brought him to the Sheridan zoo. "But it was a job holding him down until we could get a rope on him," the men said.

LONDON CIVIC LEADERS PRESS FIGHT AGAINST STAGE NUDITY

LONDON.—(INS)—A clean-up campaign similar to New York's burlesque "purge" today was being discussed by London's civic leaders as a result of recent blasts by the Bishop of London against nudity on the stage.

Ecclesiastical leaders were up in arms against the scantily-clad ladies who were strip-teasing the old England.

Dr. Winnington Ingram, the Bishop of London, for 36 years chairman of the Public Morality Council, pointed out recently that nudity on the stage was rampant.

"Nudity on the stage is, I think, dishonorable to the girls and extremely bad for the decadent young man who finds pleasure in it," remarked the Bishop.

Referring to the time when the morality council was regarded as a bunch of "snobs," he said, "People used to say they were sorry for the poor Bishop of London's mind—but now they're beginning to side with me."

There is nothing on the London stage which can be compared in indecency with the unrestricted burlesque of a year ago, or in nudity with the higher-priced "girlie" shows along Broadway.

American strip-teasers who have appeared in London have had to perform under wraps and in some cases have been banned.

"What London is aiming for," the Bishop said, "is a London with clean theaters and cinemas, open spaces where young people can go without temptation, and books and periodicals that they can read without question."

The 22 defendants were released pending a decision of their motion to appeal. The conviction carries a maximum penalty of two years imprisonment.

Included among the 22 were William Busick and Andrew M. Schmoeller, organizers for the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The strike occurred last February in the company's Santa Monica plant. The strikers were affiliated with the United Automobile Workers of America, aircraft division, a CIO affiliate.

District Attorney Byron Fitts broke up the strike by issuing felony complaints against the 287 men who occupied the plant. It was the first time felony warrants were issued to oust sit-down strikers.

EXPLAIN SHIFT OF NAVAL SHIPS

U. S. Officer Says Training Reason For Sudden Removal to San Pedro.

SAN PEDRO, Calif.—(AP)—Fleet organization and training were the official reasons given for the sudden transfer of nine naval destroyers from the San Diego base to San Pedro.

Staff officers said the U. S. fleet was in the highest state of efficiency and training in its history, ready for instant action in any emergency.

Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn is one of the hardest taskmasters the fleet ever had. He is secretive, placing much emphasis on the valuation of surprise.

For four years the fleet has been drawn away from routine functioning and subjected to unexpected orders. Admiral J. M. Reeves initiated this. In his two years as commander-in-chief, there were many sudden orders, some affecting the whole fleet.

Two years ago, when Admiral Hepburn succeeded Admiral Reeves, this system was intensified, the present commander-in-chief being far more secretive.

EAGLE LOSES FIGHT WITH 6

SHERIDAN, Wyo.—(AP)—It took six men to capture the eagle Dr. I. F. Hayes wounded near here.

The doctor was hunting pheasants when he saw the eagle shot twice at it. The bird fell, stunned, but was up on his feet and trying to run when Dr. Hayes and his five hunting companions overtook him.

REMEMBER THAT NIGHT MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS (Copyright 1937)

CHAPTER XVII

A long letter from Tommy came the following day. What was Tommy up to now, Philip wondered. His mouth amused, he opened it and read Tommy's glowing account of his elopement. Then he read, "You didn't do Karen such a big favor after all I felt like a heel, taking the credit of taking her to Bernie Tappan. The play has closed. It was pretty bad. Karen got a line or so from the press. Maybe I'm crazy, but I think that any girl who wants to be an actress as much as she does must have the goods. Now she's out of a job."

He asked about Lillian and concluded, "I guess you'll be joining the younger married set soon. Boy, there's nothing like it!"

Philip did not hesitate. He went directly to the telephone and called Brenda Bond in New York.

"Philip?" she asked over the Atlantic. "Nothing is wrong, I hope. Did you get me out of bed to tell me you and Lillian are married?" She laughed. "If so, then I give you my blessings, dear, but please let me go to sleep again."

He put his mouth close to the telephone and spoke in deep, clipped, clear tones, asking occasionally, "Can you hear me? Are you getting this?" and being assured by Brenda that she was hearing almost perfectly. He talked a long time. When he asked how much the call had cost and was told, he made no comment. It was worth it.

Brenda Bond called Karen one morning when she and Roxanne were having breakfast at the table by the window.

Hearing a low, friendly voice say, "This is Brenda Bond," Karen's eyes were instantly wide and excited. Roxanne put down a glass of orange juice and listened, frowning.

Brenda said, "I heard about your unfortunate experience in the Tappan play. But you must learn to expect such things, my dear. They happen to all of us. One of my plays closed after the first night. I'd like you to come to see me tomorrow evening, Karen. Come for dinner. I think what I have to offer to you will interest you." She laughed quietly. "I haven't forgotten you, you see."

Karen stammered her thanks. After Brenda had said good-bye, Karen still stood holding the receiver. She looked at Roxanne. "Brenda Bond asked me to dinner tomorrow night. What—what could she want with me?"

"I'm afraid to think she has something for me! Afraid!" She smiled nervously. "She said she hadn't forgotten me. She couldn't forget that night at Helen Ward's. I can't imagine anything she would want with me. But suppose she does have something for me in Philip's play she's rehearsing now?"

Suddenly her throat ached. Her hopes were out of control. "Oh, that's too good to be true."

Roxanne said, "Something's up. Important like Brenda Bond's. Don't seek out young actresses and invite them to dinner. It makes a fair table but it doesn't happen. Maybe Philip is behind this."

Karen shook her head. "Oh no. I'm sure he isn't. He's in England. He's been there for weeks. And he's so much in love he doesn't care what's happening to his play. He probably won't be here when it opens. He doesn't care about me. That night at Helen Ward's he was furious with me. But I don't know how I'm going to wait until tomorrow night! Why couldn't she have said to-night?"

It was one of the longest days of her life and there was still another day to endure.

That night Roxanne wore the black net frock again.

"If you can stop wondering why she sent for you, I'd like to tell you something, Karen. Something about me. I met a man, a young man, a couple weeks ago. He's a good sort. Do you think I should?"

In an instant Karen forgot herself. Looking steadily at Roxanne, she said, "You're asking me if I think you should live and be interested in men and perhaps love somebody else as you loved Bill. Yes. You've been living in the past. You can't live on a memory. You might never love the man the way you loved Bill but..."

"I never will. You said you felt married to Philip. That's how much you felt you belonged to him. That's how I feel about Bill. The tears spang in her eyes. "But why shouldn't I have fun? Try to—anyhow. I don't want to spend the rest of my life in a night club. I want to get married. Bill told me how wonderful marriage could be. You won't blame me or think I've gotten over him if I..."

"Bill set you free," Karen said gently. "That was his plan."

"That's what he thinks. I'll never be free of him. But if I could meet some nice man—I needn't have much money—I'd marry him. This new man is nice. You know, it takes a while for a man to realize that every girl who sings in a night club isn't a gold-digger."

She picked up her wrap and silver bag. "I may be late. I'm going to see Eddie after the show."

Karen dressed with care for her visit to Brenda Bond the next evening. The day being cool, she wore her gray suit with a new black blouse and a new black hat that revealed the cluster of dark curls. On the bus she tried to press down on her hopes, tried desperately to control her excitement.

Outside the door of Brenda's apartment she pressed her finger to the bell and waited. A stout, motherly looking woman dressed neatly in black admitted her. As soon as she stepped into the lovely room, Brenda came forward. She was wearing a green dinner dress.

"Hello, my dear..."

She led the way to her bedroom where Karen removed her coat and hat. And Brenda noticed that the thin hand that patted the dark curls in place shook a little.

The living room, high above the noises of the street, was quiet and beautiful. Several vases held fresh flowers. On the desk was a photograph of the distinguished gray-haired man who Karen had met briefly. Craig Stanhope. She had remembered his name. Sit-ting across a low, marble-topped table from Brenda, Karen was conscious of the older woman's serenity. A little of her excitement left her. This was so beautiful after the ugly little place where she and Roxanne lived.

Brenda studied her with calm, kind eyes.

"You've been having a bad time, haven't you? First that dreadful roof, then the play. But I've good news for you. How would you like a part in the play I'm doing, Philip's play?"

The gratitude in Karen's eyes touched her. "Yes, I mean it!"

Karen felt her mouth tremble and her tears start. Choking back, she said, "I—I don't know what to say. It's wonderful! It's... Had Brenda liked her enough the two times they had met to do this for her? Roxanne had said that things like this didn't happen. Summoning courage, she asked, "Why are you doing this for me?"

Brenda's lashes swept down. She had hoped that Karen would not ask that since it was Philip who was helping her. But he had been insistent that Karen must not know. It seemed absurd but she had promised.

"Because," Brenda said, looking at her again. "I think you're gifted. Several people who saw the Tappan play told me you were splendid. There's another reason, too, Karen. I like you. I admire your courage. I've been interested in you from the first."

Never had Karen enjoyed a dinner more. They talked about the play.

Then returning to the living room for coffee, Brenda said, "I don't know anything about you. And I'm curious. Philip told me that you were perhaps the only girl he had ever known who didn't tell him the story of her life after an acquaintance of five minutes. Women do like to talk about themselves. Who are you really, Karen? What is your background? Why this burning ambition to be an actress?"

Karen placed the small cup on the marble-topped table. Should she tell her? It was either the truth or a lie. And so, speaking quietly, she told Brenda of what had happened in Harrison on a night twenty years ago, told of her childhood, the sacrifices Aunt Hetty and Uncle John had made for her, and finally her stubborn determination to leave her job and come to New York.

"You do have a dramatic past," Brenda said. "I wish I'd known sooner. I thought you had parents and a home to go back to. It's—its strange, very strange. You didn't tell Philip this?"

"I haven't even told the girl I live with. I used to think I'd find my mother some day. I liked to dream about it. But that was foolish." Then she asked, "Is Philip married?"

Brenda's mouth curved. "No. But I suppose he will be as soon as he and Lillian return." Karen loved Philip still, she thought. "I don't know that I altogether approve of their marriage. Of course Lillian is a darling person. Every one loves her. She hasn't an enemy. But Philip loves the theatre as you and I love it. He should marry an actress."

And Karen was wishing that this evening would go on indefinitely.

PUBLICITY, ZOO SPECTATORS BLAMED IN KANGAROO'S DEATH

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — (AP) — Publicity killed a kangaroo. It was a nameless female baby of the species, the offspring of Flip and Jigger at Swope park zoo.

For six months or more she lived a normal, secluded life in her mother's pouch. Nobody knew when she was born except the parents, but as far back as last summer N. Tex Clark, director of the zoo, began to comment on the maternal look in Jigger's eyes, and to observe that she was a little more shy than usual.

It wasn't until two weeks ago that Clark's suspicions were confirmed. He saw the baby ears sticking up from the pouch. He watched closely and saw the infant take a peek at the daylight. It may have been the baby's first view of the world, since the female kangaroo is so constructed that the offspring need not come out of the pouch to eat.

Clark couldn't contain himself. He sent word to the newspapers. The crowds streamed out. The people made Jigger nervous. Since the winter weather set in, Flip and Jigger had been confined in a cage. Jigger couldn't run away to escape the peering eyes. In their native lands, kangaroos will cast their young aside so they can run faster if hunters press them too closely. It's instinctive to the kangaroo. Jigger grew so bothered with the people that he flung the baby from her pouch. It lay on a pile of hay, unable to move. Clark and his helpers seized Jigger and put the baby back, but she flung it away again. Clark hurriedly improvised a kangaroo incubator in the zoo basement. The baby was fed with an eye-dropper and for a day or two seemed to be thriving.

Then, suddenly, she died.

"Thoroughbreds Don't Cry." Thrills of the racetrack form the background for the story of childhood friendships and loyalties in "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry," opening at the Ohio theater Wednesday. The film introduces Ronald Sinclair, Hollywood's latest find in British boy actors. Others in the cast are Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney and Sophie Tucker. The picture deals with the friendship of a little English boy, grandson of a horse racing sportsman, and a young American jockey. The jockey is deceived into betraying his friend. But he finds out before the big race and attempts to right himself by winning the event.

Swing, Opera Music in Film. Selecting her numbers from grand opera, swing music and novelty tunes, Grace Moore offers a diversified musical program in her latest starring vehicle, "I'll Take Romance," at the Madison theater through Wednesday. Melvyn Douglas appears opposite the star with Stuart Erwin and Helen Westley in the principal supporting roles. From the classic opera, Miss Moore selected the Cavotte from "Macon," the Drinking Song from "Traviata," the finale from the third act of "Martha," and the duet from "Madame Butterfly." She also sings "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain," and "Paree." The film has to do with the adventures of an opera star who "Murder on Diamond Row." Edmund Lowe is cast as a super-sleuth again—this time in "Murder on Diamond Row," a mystery based on one of Edgar Wallace's detective novels. Lowe portrays an ex-Scotland Yard inspector whose taste for liquor has brought him evil days. The story tells of a mysterious London character, known to the Yard and underworld only as the Squeaker, who buys stolen gems at small figures. When the thieves refuse to sell, he reports them to Scotland Yard. Lowe gets the difficult task of uncovering the Squeaker, with his job as a reward. The second feature at the Majestic is "Whipsaw," co-starring Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy.

"Woman Chases Man." Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Charles Winninger and Erik Rhodes. Is one of the features on the double bill at the Ritz. The film depicts the story of a girl who chases a man from pillar to post to get him to sign a contract. She gets involved in a series of funny situations and winds up by landing his name on the dotted line—of a marriage license. Edward Arnold, Cary Grant, Frances Farmer and Jack Oakie head the cast of "The Toast of New York," the second attraction. The picture has to do with the battle of a man to gain control of the majority of the country's railroad stock.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1937.

Those who become agitated by fear of a boom are now breathing more easily.

When everybody is really capable of managing the business there will be no more poverty.

A democracy is a country where everybody who can't manage his own affairs knows all about running the government.

Death Took No Holiday.

A NOTE of gloom is again cast over the holiday season by the nation-wide toll of more than five hundred fatalities attributed to various causes during the Christmas week-end.

The majority of these unnatural deaths, as might be expected, resulted from traffic accidents.

While there must be continuance of efforts to decrease the number of unnecessary deaths from other causes, it is in the field of greater highway safety that the largest opportunity for improvement of methods is apparent.

When it is considered that practically all highway tragedies result from incompetent, careless, reckless and drunken driving, it can be more readily understood that an immediate and urgent need is for more drastic restrictions in the matter of issuing drivers' licenses—and stricter enforcement of traffic regulations.

In Mansfield last week a tragedy that would have shocked the city and state was narrowly averted when a motorist swung his car out of the line of waiting traffic and dashed through a red light at a busy intersection. His car struck a pedestrian who was crossing the street, but, by a fortunate combination of circumstances, this exhibition of disregard for rules of safe driving escaped being another fatality.

Ohio's liability law and requirement of driver's license is a short step in the direction of greater highway safety in this state. There will be need, however, for a considerable weeding out of mentally and physically unfit drivers before there can be a material reduction of needless deaths from traffic accidents.

Present-day street and highway motor traffic is too complicated for any except competent, careful and completely sober drivers.

The Japanese Problem.

EXCHANGES between Washington and Tokyo, over the Panay outrage, have been difficult for this reason: Our government is limited to diplomatic negotiations with the Japanese government, when it is the army that is in control.

The civil authorities nominally in charge of the Japanese government, and Japanese civilians at home and elsewhere, show their good will. But they seem powerless against the fierce drive of the imperialists—the military class and trade barons—for seizure of foreign materials and markets.

There is much to indicate that the army itself is divided, with many of the older officers advising moderation, but with the younger ones, crazy for conquest, inclined to flout them as well as the civil government. This explains the confusion and the shifting attitude of Japan in making amends to our government for the recent offenses.

The war-makers cheerfully deny their deeds, manufacture evidence and insist on plunging ahead, regardless of consequences. Thus our government has not only the problem of presenting its own case, but the more difficult task of strengthening the hands of the Japanese civil government in its effort to meet American demands.

Calm In 'Recession.'

THE BRITISH, it appears, take their troubles calmly. Anne O'Hare McCormick, who has been traveling about in Europe, talking with statesmen, private citizens, business men, and others, found Great Britain as deeply involved in the present-day chaos uncertainty as any country. The business "recession" there is a little worse than ours, because it has come even while heavy building construction and the rearmament program are still going at top speed.

With all this, she found the British more cheerful and unperturbed than any people she has seen in her explorations.

"The British worry less than any people on earth," she writes. "They are not worrying now. Never was this rejuvenated town (London) so bright, so bustling, so bent on merry-making. Listening to its pleasantly aimless talk, it becomes clear that the British live much less in the moment than we do. The news in general is less important. In this respect London is actually farther from Europe than New York."

Perhaps this is because the British have seen so many tense moments come and go and have outlasted so many world crises.

Keeping Christmas Cards.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, long known as an enthusiastic collector of postage stamps and prints of sailing ships, is revealed as having another pleasant hobby. He collects Christmas cards, going through the vast accumulation reaching him every year and saving the most artistic and interesting ones.

It is a charming fad. Christmas cards have become an art in themselves, and almost everyone now gets cards that are worth preserving for their beauty or uniqueness. Selected specimens, along with their appeal as friendly souvenirs, may be treasured in future years for their intrinsic value or rarity.

Pullman-Coach Rivalry.

RAILROADS have complained of the keen competition of buses and private automobiles. Now the Pullman company complains of the competition of the railroads themselves. Modernized and comfortable day coaches, air-conditioned, with more conveniences and better service than ever before at lower fares, are causing travelers to stop buying Pullman berths.

It is a knotty problem, but only one of many, and probably not beyond intelligent solution. If everyone who would like to travel could do so to his heart's content, it is likely all the Pullman cars and elegant day coaches and buses and private cars and trailers and boats and airplanes would be taxed to capacity to take care of the crowds.

Labor and Agriculture Seek Common Ground

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—The 1938 congressional campaign will begin to show how effectively urban labor and agriculture can be politically combined.

To be sure, there has been a Farmer-Labor party for a long time, but heretofore it never has been potent except locally. Its main strength has been in Minnesota, doubtless due to the able leadership of Senators Henrik Shipstead and Ernest Lundeen of the North Star commonwealth. Besides these two senators the party also has five representatives in Washington—all Minnesotans.

Of course, there likewise are many Democratic and Republican legislators who are pro-labor or pro-agriculture, and in a general way, mutually friendly, but not actually allied.

THEIR DIFFERENCES

I would not say that urban workers and farmers have been antagonistic toward one another. Theoretically they should have interests in common. As a practical proposition their respective interests do seem to conflict.

The farmer, if he is a good farmer, does not need to buy much. He has his shelter, already paid for. His equipment needs replacement only semi-occasionally. He sets his own table. His wardrobe is inexpensive. His cash outgo is relatively trifling. What he wants is a high price for the crops he has to sell. He is a natural inflationist. Rising living costs do not afflict him. He keeps ahead of them.

The urban worker has not anything to sell directly. He is a buyer. His rent is boosted. His groceries cost him more. So do his clothes. His money does not go so far as it did before. In the long run, doubtless his wages will be hiked, too, but there will be a lag; in the meantime he will be pinched.

AFFECT EACH OTHER

Ultimately, if farm prices are too low, urban labor begins to feel a reaction, and urban unemployment results.

Ultimately, if consumer prices mount to a figure that urban labor cannot meet, then urban labor has to curtail its buying, and agriculture feels the unfavorable reaction.

There is an economic slump either way.

A lot of collateral factors enter into the equation, but that is the nub of it.

TRYING FOR COALITION

Well, Labor's Non-Partisan league is trying to get these two elements together.

It is natural that urban labor should take the initiative, for urban labor is more compactly organized than agriculture.

Agriculture is highly individualistic. It has its organizations, but there are a considerable number of them. Urban labor is split, too, but split only two ways. Labor's Non-Partisan league is the one which makes its bid to the farmer.

ARGUMENT TO FARMERS

"Our league," said the organization's Executive Vice President E. L. Oliver of the organization, at Mitchell (S. D.) on a recent trip through the northwest, "will support the farmers' program in every possible way."

"We will be for you in every industrial district in the United States."

"We will insist that congressmen who represent city workers must vote with farmer representatives to protect farmer interests."

"If the farmers will join us we will be irresistible."

1938 TO GIVE CLUE?

Vice President Oliver doubtless is right.

If urban labor and agriculture can be combined, probably the alliance will be irresistible.

As a bystander, I still think that their interests seem to clash.

However, Labor's Non-Partisan league says:

"Recognizing that labor and farmers can be subjected only by keeping us disunited, our common opposition has heretofore succeeded in preventing united action."

United action?—on a national scale?

The year 1938 will begin to demonstrate.

"Opportunity Schools" for Unemployed

(Recently we asked Young America this question—"IF YOU WERE SANTA CLAUS, WHAT GIFT WOULD YOU BRING THIS NATION?" Never, within the memory of the most grizzled editor, has such an amazing and brilliant response been received. During this week we will run some of these remarkable answers. How does Young America feel about its country? Here's how!)

A TEACHER without a job . . . a child without the proper education—this tragedy darkens every cross-roads in America. And no one knows better than Youth, itself, this bitter burden on young life.

The child who can't make the grade . . . and the teacher who can't get a grade—if Helen Fite of Marion, Indiana, were Santa Claus she'd wipe this child from America. Here's her New Year plan:

"There are thousands of teachers unemployed. Thousands of children of sub-average intelligence who are receiving no help at all, or are being pushed into the back seats in congested school rooms. These children aren't really dumb—they are simply different. They need special care, which it is impossible to give them with crowded space and time. As a consequence, such children get the idea that they are inferior, and keep it all their lives. They quit school early and become a hopeless burden to themselves and everyone else."

"It is heartbreaking to stand before a room of sixty-two second grade children (three rooms in one) and grope for time to care for them all. Really all that can be done is to keep a semblance of discipline. The average teacher must give her time to the quick-witted—while the slow ones are given nothing. I've seen darling little boys and girls—temperamental, nervous, backward, physically untalented—placed in the back seats, hands folded, gazing vacantly out the window."

"I would get more thrill and uplift out of teaching a twelve-year-old child of eight-year-old intelligence to count to fifty than I would in listening to one of my pupils of twelve years recite Shakespeare."

"These little ones still believe in Santa. You be believe in them; bring them opportunity, rooms, pleasant, understanding men and women to help them."

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY
Friday, Dec. 28, 1917.

United States government took over operation of all railroads.

Mrs. John W. Powers, 72, died at her home, 175 South Franklin avenue.

Miss Fleeta Marie Pittenger and Alfred C. Fackler were married at home of bride's parents.

Mansfield high school alumni dance was held at Elk home.

Announcement was made of marriage of Miss Ruth Page, of Youngstown, and A. Tully Reynolds, of Mansfield.

Miss Inez McKee, formerly of Mansfield, was cited for bravery while serving as nurse in France.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY
Wednesday, Dec. 28, 1932.

Technocracy was subject of much conversation, and The News-Journal started a series of articles on the newest "ism."

S. Fin Bell and George Rickett, G. A. R. members, were ill at their homes and unable to make their daily excursion to Memorial hall.

Bad news for taxpayers came from office of County Treasurer Arthur S. Lantz, who announced that collection of taxes would start Jan. 3.

Ray W. Ward was elected president of the Mansfield Affiliated Beaufortians at meeting in Mansfield-Leland hotel.

The Misses Nina and Mary Brian Lotam, were house guests of Mrs. C. H. Bollman.

AND from 19-year-old George W. Kyte, U. C. student of Berkeley, Calif., came another EDUCATIONAL GIFT FOR AMERICA.

A HUGE INTERNATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EXCHANGE SCHOLARSHIPS AND PROFESSIONAL AND TRAVELLING FELLOWSHIPS.

"This would educate our hearts as well as our minds," says George. "It would break down national prejudice and racial intolerance . . . it would be the greatest possible protection against world war."

"Under this foundation many thousands of the most brilliant students and hundreds of the most brilliant educators of this country would be sent abroad to study or teach at foreign universities. Students would be sent from this country to study at Copenhagen, Adelaide, Oxford, Heidelberg, Upsala, Cairo, Tokyo, Paris, and similar institutions. And students and professors from these foreign centers of learning would come to our great universities as well as to universities of other nations foreign to their own."

"In this way the world would be united by a powerful bond of international understanding and respect. An American would discover a Japanese to be a decent fellow like himself, and vice versa."

And now for some older suggestions.

Do YOU, as a parent and taxpayer, think such a plan would be feasible? Would YOU, as a priest or pastor, lawyer, doctor, engineer or progressive thinker, be willing to send your name in endorsement of such a program and pass the idea along? Or perhaps you're against it. Then, if so, why? Either side—we want to know.

Keeping Step

By LESLIE EICHEL

May Try To Salvage New Deal Program.

WHEN CONGRESS returns for the regular session beginning Jan. 3, President Roosevelt is expected to return once more to the New Deal. Possibly so. He may have arrived at the belief that he cannot move congress into action except by militantly espousing the cause of the mass of people.

The president is said to be preparing a militant restatement of his policies and hopes. He will make this restatement in a message to congress and over the radio.

Congress almost proved a case for dictatorship in its special session—if one can judge by the murmurs of the people. And just when the world needs a lesson in more democracy and the functioning of democracy.

The executive branch of the American government has been functioning well, but the legislative branch has given itself over to lethargy, obstructionism, pork barrelism and reaction. Congress, instead of taking a strong forward, independent attitude, has tried to turn the hands of the clock back and has given itself over to interests which speak "democracy" but practice the opposite. That is the view one hears among the mass of people.

Even the manifesto, drawn up by Senator Vandenberg, Republican of Michigan, and Senator Bailey, anti-New Deal Democrat, of North Carolina, and extolled by a coalition, as a program which would put the country and business on their feet, seems upon sober second reading to be nothing more than another effort among the many, to turn the clock back.

THE LEADERS?

Evidently President Roosevelt has decided that he must revert to liberals in the senate for leadership, if he is to salvage the remainder of his program.

That involves a danger to him in a party sense, if he desires to guide toward a successor. The successor may not be a Democrat.

When the special session of congress adjourned, the president called to the White House for a conference Senators La Follette of Wisconsin, Wagner of New York, Norris of Nebraska, Minton of Indiana, Schwellenbach of Washington, Green of Rhode Island, Brown of New Hampshire and Pepper of Florida.

The chief presidential timber in that group is La Follette—and he is a Progressive, an independent. He never has been a Democrat.

The others, with the exception of Norris, are Democrats, but it is questionable whether they could advance that we correct any business practices that may merely help to lead us into another crash. Still others are impatient toward this imperfect world and press pet reform ideas, often with no realization of their real effects.

First, let it be remembered that we live in a democracy and that what democracies do is to work out compromises. Second, we must not forget that all of us, including government officials, are limited in our knowledge and in our power. Third, it should be noticed that whatever we do will have consequences in all directions, and that many of these consequences cannot be foreseen. This is no excuse for cowardice but it is a reminder that we should be thoughtful and not rash.

What, then, should be our aim under present conditions? What should we demand and what compromises should be made? It is clear that government expenditures should be reduced. There is this year a persisting deficit and a large one, but fortunately it is less than last year. We may be grateful for the gain but insist that more economies should be practised, though not by ignoring the condition of the unemployed.

Next, we may properly demand that reformers curb their impatience, giving us time to digest reforms that have been made and to correct errors. An illustration is the serious mistake of trying to build up a fictitious reserve fund of $47,000,000,000 as required by the present Social Security Act.

Finally, there are uncertainties to be removed. One is connected with our money system. In the last 12 months the business world has twice suffered—once, last spring, when it was rumored that the price of gold would be lowered, and again, in the last few weeks, when it was reported that the price of gold might be raised still higher.

These are only illustrations. Each of the almost countless questions before us calls for careful examination on its merits. Taxation, wages and hours, agricultural controls, regional power development and the rest, raise issues for which glib answers can be given only by those who find economic life a simple thing. The writer of this column is not in that group.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Raining Cats and Dogs.

In the goblin-garred days of long ago, the cat, the dog and the wolf were known to influence the weather.

The dog and the wolf, attendants of Odin, the storm-god, were Northern symbols of wind, while the cat reigned over rain.

So, witches pictured as riding through a gale, were represented with the head of a cat, and there are still in existence old German works of art showing blasts of wind issuing from the mouth of a dog or wolf.

Among the enlightened peoples, this curious sort of belief has, of course, long since passed out; but living language resurrected dead and hygone ideas which it crystallizes for us in such an expression as "raining cats and dogs," which was born of ancient credulity.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

QUITE a number of show people vanish from Broadway but are no further away than those peaceful New Jersey and Long Island suburbs with spreading lawns, tree-lined streets and block after block of houses as alike as candles in a box.

The recent passing of Edna Leedom, the comedienne, is a striking illustration. She was as much a part of the show strip as Fannie Brice today. A frequent patron of the bright cafes and often with the gang at Reuben's when the sun was casting a bleary eye over the island.

Then news one day of her marriage and the Riato saw her no more. It developed that all the while she was living in nearby Jackson Heights, going to market daily, attending meetings of the women's clubs, and rearing a child, Jessie Reed, noted Follies beauty, vanished similarly.

Alice Phoebe, Ziegfeld's famous telephone girl, has a list of stage beauties of show days who did not know existed. All their professional lives were cast in cheap hotels, raffish dressing rooms and sleeper jumps. They expressed the gratitude of freed slaves—and never want to see the big town again. Or so they say.

Frequently the mail brings letters from old troupers in southern California or Florida who stress a living usefulness they profess not to know existed. All their professional lives were cast in cheap hotels, raffish dressing rooms and sleeper jumps. They expressed the gratitude of freed slaves—and never want to see the big town again. Or so they say.

The young publisher, M. Lincoln Schuster, is said to have the slightest of the private libraries. To accommodate some 10,000 volumes of his bibliophile treasures he built a Georgian wing to his house at Seacliffe, L. I. It is air conditioned and shelves are lit by independent lighting. But the very gee whiz in private library elegance was expressed by the now broke Duke of Manchester in his opulent days. He had a night librarian, on duty to bring any volume desired if his Grace had a sleepless hour or so and felt like reading.

Anyone watching cartoonists at work will agree it's the most gruesome of professional grinds. More than most creative workers, they have difficulty taking off even after they have settled on an idea. For every cartoon is a dozen or so approaches, and often they make innumerable drafts before hitting upon one they like. Cartoonists in the period of gestation. They cannot walk and ruminate as the writer or sculptor. Thus for hours they stew in their own juice until they strike their gait—then they often finish the job in an hour. Most cartoonists I have known take an oath almost weekly they will never draw another cartoon.

Homar Davenport was said to be the most sensitive to reader reaction of the Timmers. If the managing editor did not show almost immediate approval of his completed stint for the day he would snatch it away and tear it to bits, but with no show of anger. He would merely go to work and produce another, believing a cartoon's province was to please by a glance. If it did not catch the editor's eye thus he did not think it would the reader's. Incidentally, three of America's most gifted cartoonists—Webster, Ding, and Dave—during their careers, learned to draw with their left hands after their rights went back on them.

They never learn note: Sam Ryd, cast so long as the wit-tit of white trash in "To-ho, Ho!" took his several years' earnings and went there in a quizzical theatrical venture of his own. Again he has a similar role in a play destined for a long run. "Of Mice and Men." And already, as his weekly salary piles up, he is making plans to invest it in another similar venture.

The sum total of my ambitions through life centered on colunming, so the other callings have had slight appeal. I have stuck to my last. Yet I invariably suffer a vague discontent when a tap dancer rat-a-tats off the stage to a burst of applause.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

A FRIEND IN NEED: And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.—The Acts 9:17, 18.

COUNTY ACTS TO CARRY OUT AUTO TITLE ACT

Clerk Prepares to Put New Law Into Effect Jan. 1 Despite Local Suit.

Despite an action now pending in the Richland county courts to prevent the new state automobile certificate of title law from going into effect in the county, attaches of Clerk of Courts Fred R. Zellner's office were preparing today to set the law's machinery in operation by Jan. 1.

Replacing the bill of sale for motor vehicles with a certificate of title which will cost at least three times as much, the law is designed to prevent the importation of stolen automobiles into the state and frauds in the transfer of title.

So complicated is the law in its make-up that new sets of records will be required by the clerk of courts who is in charge of registrations, and it is expected that one or two additional clerks will be needed to issue the certificates, Zellner said.

Norman P. Henry, deputy clerk in charge of auto registration, predicted that the law will double the county's income from auto registrations. He was unable to say, however, to what extent the added expense will consume the income from the registrations.

Won't Affect Old Bills.

Henry explained that the new law will not affect the bills of sale now held by auto and truck owners.

"The old bills of sale will be good until title to the car is transferred or the owner purchases another car," he said. "Then the new certificate must be issued in the county of the motor vehicle owner's residence, regardless of where the transfer of ownership occurred."

Cost of the certificate of title in cases where cars are purchased on the time payment plan may be as high as $1.60, which includes 75 cents for the original certificate, 25 cents for a memorandum certificate, and 30 cents each for recording the lien on the car and for cancelling the lien when the final payment is made.

The cost must be paid by the automobile dealer who is not permitted to pass the expense on to the purchaser. The state will receive 25 cents of each 75 cents collected for the title certificates.

County Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott said today it is unlikely that a hearing on an action filed by H. M. Rust, Mansfield attorney, to declare the law unconstitutional, would be held until sometime next month.

Rust, who filed the petition as a taxpayer, charged that the law is unconstitutional since it tends to place the clerk of courts in a judicial capacity as the judge of whether a certificate of title shall be issued.

"Unless the law becomes operative here Jan. 1, no automobile title would be issued in the county," Marriott said. "The act is unconstitutional until a court has held it otherwise."

Buffalo Homes Darkened as Generator Catches Fire.

BUFFALO, N. Y. — An electric power failure threw 150,000 homes into partial darkness during gloomy weather here today, put all traffic lights out of commission and affected downtown buildings, hospitals and a few factories.

The failure was caused by a fire in a generator in an electric plant in suburban Tonawanda.

Office workers, store clerks and customers were reported trapped in elevators in at least one large department store and eight office buildings.

COLDER, RAIN OR SNOW FORECAST

Temperature Drops To Freezing But Rises Quickly.

More cloudy weather with the prospect of rain or snow and cold Wednesday was seen today by the weatherman.

A light snow which started falling yesterday turned to rain as the mercury rose to 37 degrees, and the average mercury reading for the past 24 hours was 34.5, or 10 degrees above normal.

Although the temperature dropped to freezing last night, the county area escaped another ice coating as a light rain continued to fall. The mercury stood at 34 degrees above zero at noon today.

nine naval destroyers here from San Diego for patrol duty enlivened the navy's mysterious maneuvers in the Pacific today.

The Los Angeles Daily News said today that navy authorities were discussing reports that "an alien flotilla of submarines, probably Japanese," had been seen off the coast.

The newspaper said the information came from "a man well versed in naval secrets both in California and Washington," and that the informant said it was feasible for Japanese submarines to operate from some secluded place along the Lower California coast.

Commander C. J. Wheeler, secretary to Admiral Arthur J. Heppburn, commander-in-chief of the fleet, denied the rumor.

"The navy has not taken any stock in it," Wheeler said. "The report is about a week old, first described only one submarine. It appears to have grown into a flotilla."

The Los Angeles newspaper informant said the navy had sent seaplanes to scout for the submarines. He did not say what the fliers intended to do had they found them.

Navy authorities continued to describe the movement of the destroyers as part of a routine security program.

REPLY TO BRITISH

TOKYO — (AP) — Foreign Minister Koki Hirota tonight delivered a speech in which he replied to the British ambassador's reply to a protest against Japanese attack on the British gunboat Ladybird.

The text of the note was not made public, but the military section of imperial headquarters issued a statement saying the attack was a "mistake" and expressing regrets. One sailor was killed in the attack.

The Japanese note was given to Ambassador G. H. Harbord after Hirota reported details of the government's investigation to the emperor.

His report on the attack, which occurred on the Yangtze river on the same day the United States gunboat Panay was sent to the bottom by Japanese bombs, included the government's measures for amicable settlement with Great Britain.

Meanwhile Tokyo newspapers hailed settlement of the Panay bombing as a tribute to "the cohesiveness and sincerity" of Japanese and United States governments and peoples.

BOMB JAP LAUNCH

SHANGHAI — (AP) — Daring Chinese grenadiers bombed a Japanese army launch in Soochow creek today for the second time in 24 hours.

Three men waited on the Cheung chiao bridge across the creek, high above the launch, and fired a salvo of grenades and bombs at the launch as it passed. Japanese soldiers in the launch fired vainly at them. It was reported that one Japanese soldier had been wounded.

The attacks on Japanese army launches, it was noted, started almost at the hour of the promulgation by Japanese authorities of new drastic regulations prescribing the death penalty for anyone, including Americans and other foreigners, who molested the Japanese army or navy in occupied territory.

So alarmed were Shanghai municipal police at the new development that tonight they closed all but four bridges over Soochow creek, and the traffic on the four which remained open was halted every time a Japanese boat passed.

egg nog and possibly a beer that evening.

Other inquest witnesses were Lucius Cochran, 33, of nearby Youngstown, friend of the family, and Mrs. Uretta Bronch, sister of Miss Campbell, both of whom were present in the red brick Campbell mansion at the time of the shooting.

The testimony was taken behind the closed doors of the prosecutor's office. Neither Dr. Henshaw nor Haegen would discuss it in detail.

Hodge said the slim dog fancier and houseman had expressed no desire to leave the jail and Mrs. Bronch added that Miss Campbell seemed "perfectly contented to remain in the jail."

"She told me," Hodge said, "that she wants to die."

Hodge said his client told him she left the house Christmas eve and went to her car outside, but found she did not have the ignition keys.

"Before leaving the car she picked up a gun which she usually carried in the car and which was lying on the front seat," Hodge said. "Her big dog was in the car and was jumping from seat to seat and she was afraid that he might accidentally set the 'gun off.'"

Hodge said she returned to the house and when nobody answered her question about the car keys, "stepped up to within one foot of a candle and then fired."

"Mrs. Campbell, who was standing near a table wrapping Christmas packages, attempted to take the gun from her daughter after the shot and as she seized it the revolver went off and the bullet went through her abdomen."

County investigators said they were told approximately the same story by other witnesses.

Funeral services for Mrs. Campbell, which family friends said would be rigidly private, were scheduled for this afternoon.

HELD TO JURY IN PURSE THEFT

Suspect Pleads Innocent in City Court, Bound Over Under $5,000 Bond.

Entering a plea of innocence when arraigned in municipal court today on charges of robbery, George Williams, 26, colored, of 13 Madison avenue, was bound over to the grand jury under $5,000 bond.

Williams was arrested on Surrey road by Lieut. Paul Whipp and Patrolman Russell Miles Friday night five minutes after Mrs. Jacob Mayer, 474 Springmill street, had been robbed of her purse as she walked along Springmill at Miller street.

Mrs. Mayer testified a colored man answered the description of Williams had approached her from the rear, struck her on the head, knocking her to the sidewalk, and then snatched her purse and ran south on Miller street.

She told the court her purse, which police later found empty behind a house on Lafayette street, contained a $5 bill, $1 bill, a nickel and three pennies.

The officers testified that the exact amount of money was taken from Williams when he was arrested.

Williams denied he had taken the purse and that he had been in the vicinity of Miller street. He said he had received the money from a relative.

SENATE GROUP CONSIDERS NEW RELIEF SET-UP

Committee Begins Study of Program Calling For Fund of 12 Millions.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The senate relief committee began consideration today of a $12,000,000 long-range relief program for Ohio which already bore the stamp of house approval.

Another senate committee, appointed to investigate allegations of "legalized graft" in state departments, also deliberated but a date for public hearings on the charges remained undisclosed.

Chairman J. Ralph Seidner and former Sen. James M. Metzbaum, counsel for the committee, conferred yesterday but made no announcement. It was anticipated generally that the hearings would begin later in the week.

Calls Commissioner. Meanwhile, Montgomery County Commissioner Sam S. Carr, chairman of the taxation and legislative committee of the Midwestern County Officers' association, issued a call to commissioners of Ohio's 88 counties to meet with the senate relief committee today for consideration of house-approved relief bills.

The would allocate $6,500,000 sales tax revenues and provide that local subdivisions be required to match only half the total amount received from the state. Thus the cities would put up $3,250,000.

Another house-approved bill to be acted upon by the relief committee would re-enact the one percent utility excise, beverages, malt and wort taxes for two years and allocate amusement taxes for relief for a similar period, for a total of $5,500,000.

Four bills, three of them emergency measures, were signed by Gov. Martin L. Davey yesterday. They provide:

Validation of transfers of money for flood relief made by various Ohio river cities last spring after the legal transfer time had expired.

Authorization of use of unexpended flood relief funds by counties for poor relief.

Appropriation of $190,000 for the state employment service.

Validation of various bond issues for works progress administration projects in which there were technical errors.

DEATH TOLL IN '37 FLOOD SET AT 400 PERSONS

Year Brought Millions In Damage to Communities Along Ohio River.

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Memories of the nation's worst flood still fresh, Ohio valley communities reported progress today toward a time when raging waters will be under man's control.

Millions of dollars have been spent for flood protection; other millions have been earmarked for mighty projects to control the sudden rush of waters from tributaries into the Ohio river, still one of the leading arteries of inland water transportation.

Cities and towns along the 981-mile river, devastated by record, muddy, debris-filled waters the last 15 days of January, 1937, have created "disaster councils" and formulated programs to cope with similar future emergencies.

Death Toll 400. Unofficial figures disclosed that nearly 400 persons died as the result of the flood, including at least 25 in Ohio, and that the property loss was approximated $550,000,000.

President Roosevelt recently authorized $24,877,000 for flood prevention and many river-front municipalities are spending thousands of dollars for water safeguards, but U. S. engineers said it would be several years before a complete river control program might be realized.

Private industry has launched programs to protect its property from destructive waters, most of them being drawn with the assumption that a flood exceeding 1937 is impossible. The Cincinnati Gas & Electric company, however, engineered a $6,000,000 improvement to resist an 85-foot river level.

Cincinnati, where the water rose to a record height of 79.99 feet, took the initiative in enacting legislation to minimize flood dangers. Its ordinance requiring that gasoline and oil containers be strapped down was copied by other river municipalities. During the flood's critical stage, a $1,500,000 fire, fed by millions of gallons of oil and gasoline, struck Cincinnati's Mill-creek valley industrial district.

Fortsmouth, another city hard hit, took the lead in bolstering its flood defenses. The steel and shoe-manufacturing center, guarded by a 60-foot seawall, adopted a $200,000 bond issue to finance improvement of this protection. Flood waters swept over the wall Jan. 22 and crippled business in the city for weeks.

Future Depends On Park

Mansfield Must Provide New Playing Field to Interest Red Sox.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.
WHY not build a ball park so that the Red Sox will return with a team again next year? asks an anonymous writer. The suggestion is not new, but the idea merits consideration. The suggestion has been forwarded by fans ever since the last season came to a close.

18,074 Jam Garden To See Cage Games.

NEW YORK (AP)—Another capacity crowd was expected in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night when Minnesota and Stanford shoot for a clean sweep over eastern basketball rivals.

A crowd of 18,074 jammed all available space to see Minnesota, co-champion of the Big Ten, wallop Long Island university, 56-41, and Stanford, Pacific Coast conference titleholder, beat City College of New York, 45-42. It exceeded by 74 persons the previous largest basketball turnout in this city and was believed to be a new record turnout for the sport in this country.

Not likely to obtain a stadium unless a public subscription for finances is conducted.

To raise money for a park is more than a one man's job, and a solicitation cannot be staged in a day or two. The time is now ripe for action if Mansfield wants a ball team next year.

The Boston club is not interested in retaining the Mansfield franchise if it improved playing facilities are not provided, we understand.

So if Mansfield wishes to be represented in the Ohio State league again next summer, it had better get busy outlining plans with which it can obtain a park.

To wait many weeks before offering some kind of a proposition to induce the Red Sox to return may prove fatal.

What do you think about it, Mr. and Mrs. Fan? Do you believe Mansfield is interested enough in baseball to launch a drive to raise finances for the erection of a ball yard? Let's hear from you.

Only eight Ohio State players have been represented on All-America teams. They are: Chick Harley, Pete Stinchcomb, Ed Hess, Leo Raskowski, Wes Fessler, Regis Monahan, Gomer Jones and, of course, Inwood Smith.

Frank Wilton, Miami U. coach, may be the next Cincinnati mentor, the grapevine says.

Coast writers say Joe Louis, who recently visited out there, is hopeless as newspaper copy writer: "Mebbe he believes heavyweight champions should be felt and not heard."

De Correvont a Marked Man Since Day He Joined Frosh

The following is the second of a series of articles on Bill De Correvont, Chicago high school sensation.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
CHICAGO (AP)—From almost the first day Bill De Correvont appeared on the Austin high practice field four years ago he's been a marked man. In his first scrimmage with the freshmen against the varsity he reeled off four touchdowns and from that day on he's been a star.

In his first game he clicked off a 15-yard touchdown dash and for four years scored in every game except one. In that game in his freshman year he was carried off the field after 3 minutes of play with a splintered hip-bone.

As a sophomore he scored 62 points, as a junior 56 and as a senior the astounding total of 210 points in 10 games—an all-time Chicago prep school record. Until De Correvont came along the record was 105.

In his 10 games this year he has reeled off a total of 1,872 yards from scrimmage and on punt returns. From scrimmage he gained 1,066 yards which tops the national professional league record of 1,004 yards hung up by Beattie Fethers, Chicago Bears.

And in only one game did he play throughout.

FRANK HART WINS BOUT

Defeats Walter Stratton In Thrilling Match In Armory Ring.

FRANKIE HART, Holland's contribution of the lightweight, defeated Walter Stratton, the most popular and talented members of this division, Walter Stratton, in the feature match of the Quality club's weekly show at the Armory last night.

Hart and Stratton grappled 26 minutes of the first stanza before Frankie was able to wind Stratton into the famous "Flying Windmill" and win the fall. The Hollander and Stratton presented the acme of scientific grappling in this fall and grip after grip was broken as the boys warmed up to their task.

The "Flying Windmill" grip of the Hollander is a combination of hold scissoring and "burrill roll" the hold making it possible to roll the hold in a dizzy, after which the Dutch man applies the pressure and flat tens them to the canvas.

Employers Too Hold.

Stratton worked a series of toe holds to win the second fall of the bout in a few seconds more than seven minutes. To take the fall, Stratton clamped his into a double toe hold and really applied the pressure until the Hollander was ready to "surrender."

Stratton tried hard to work the same grip upon Hart in the final stanza, but the cratty Dutchman was far too fast for the Leetonia farmer boy. Hart repeatedly resorted to the head scissor and in about six minutes Hart again had Stratton pinned to the mat with a mild form of the "Windmill."

To say that this bout was one of the best of the current season is putting it mildly. To us, it was the "top" Both boys displayed more grips and showed more ability than has been presented here all winter.

The semi-natural "burrill" battle between Colby Blake of Columbus and "Silver Streak" Davis of Houston, Tex., heated out in less than six minutes. Scheduled as a 10-round boxing contest, it turned into a three-round farce comedy.

had stepped out of bounds. In this same game he was in the open racing for a touchdown when a Farragut substitute leaped off the bench and downed him.

On the next kickoff he raced down the field and dropped the ball-carrier with a deadly tackle.

Heiland attributes De Correvont's success as a ball-carrier to:

(1) his speed; (2) his deceptive change of pace; (3) his uncanny knack of "photographing" the defensive setup at a swift glance; (4) his ability to run either to his left or right.

Like many famed runner, De Correvont uses his speed to feint tacklers. Rarely does he turn on full steam until he has jockeyed the tackler where he wants him.

Some have criticized De Correvont by saying: "He can't block."

Coach Heiland answers that by saying: "Asking De Correvont to block would be like hitching War Admiral to a wagon load of hay. But if De Correvont were asked to block he'd be a star at that too."

MORE than half of De Correvont's touchdowns have been made on long runs. His longest dash was 99 yards against Farragut, this year but it was called back because officials ruled he

Pole-Vaulting Duel Highlight of Season

By GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK (AP)—A long series of thrilling mile and 1,500-meter races between the two flying Kansans, Glenn Cunningham and Archie San Romani, and a pole-vaulting duel to the death between two University of Southern California team-mates, Earle Meadows and Bill Sefton, highlighted the 1937 track-and-field campaign.

Starting indoors, the veteran Cunningham and his youthful rival for distance honors battled each other the length and breadth of the U. S., without either winning a clear decision for the year.

Cunningham finished ahead the most times, but San Romani was the victor in the most coveted mile race, the Princeton invitation.

In a blanket finish, San Romani won it in the exceptional time of 4:07.2. Don Lash, who finished second, was so close he received the same time, and Cunningham was third in 4:07.4.

The greatest mile of the year, though, was run in London by Stanley Wooderson, a spindleg-legged little clerk. Paced by two men, he rang up the world record time of 4:06.6, beating the previous best of 4:06.7 held by Cunningham.

Meadows and Sefton, vaulting methodically together in meet after meet, kept boosting their own record until it began to look like an act. On April 10 they soared to 14 feet, 7 1/2 inches for a new high. On May 28 they put it up to 14 feet, 11 inches, and there they left it for the time being.

Helen Stephens contributed the outstanding women's performance for the year with new world records of 10.5 for the 100-yard dash and 25 seconds flat for the 220. Later she turned professional.

Honus Wagner Reminisces With Danville, O., Brother

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Two baseball players of yesterday reminisced today about old times and recalled how a barber's apprentice was fired and became the game's greatest shortstop.

They went over the story as William "Bill" Wagner, a big league player of years ago, dropped in on his brother Honus, one of the immortals of the diamond, now coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Honus likes to tell the story of those days when his fingers, grasping the razor and brush, itched for the ball and glove. One day he found the urge too strong, and neglected to show up for work. It was a busy Saturday.

"And so I was fired from the job," smiles Honus, "and with nothing else left for me to do, I was forced to look to baseball for my bread and butter."

"And," laughs Bill, "I was the barber who fired you."

In those days, Bill's shop was in nearby Carnegie, where Honus still has his home. The two always have been pals, and the brotherly feeling is stronger than ever now that the other sons of the late Peter Wagner have answered the call of the great umpire.

But Bill, too, was a clever ball player, and 40 years ago held down third base at Louisville, which then was a member of the old National league. Later he starred with the Toronto club, but when his playing days were over, Bill went back to barbering.

He now lives at Danville, O., and says he often meets George McQuillan, who once pitched for the Pirates, and Pat Flaherty, another old National league player who learned the game on the sandlots of Pittsburgh. Both are in business in Columbus.

Budge Offers to Play Crawford After Defeat.

SYRNEY, Australia.—(AP)—Pleading that "a man can't be at the top all the time—I'm no machine," Don Budge offered today to meet Jack Crawford to make up for a listless defeat in exhibition tennis at the hands of Baron Gottfried Von Cramm.

Ryan Fullet, president of the new South Wales Tennis association, announced the red-headed Californian's apology to angry White City tennis fans over the loudspeaker and told of Budge's desire to make amends tomorrow by playing Crawford, the Australian star.

Budge who was dumberfounded and hurt by the bitter criticism of officials, press and the public, explained his listless exhibition game yesterday in which Von Cramm of Germany defeated him, 6-1, 6-3. "I don't want to be keyed up on nothing is hanging on the matter. If I am beaten at home in an exhibition the Americans aren't concerned."

Keeps Record Clean by Smothering Mack's Oils, 60 to 19, in City League Tilt at M. H. S.; Westies Turn Back Canzols.

By CHARLES MARTIN
ESTABLISHING a new team scoring record, the pace-setting Yunker Sports aggregation smothered the Mack Pure Oils, 60 to 19, last night before a fair-sized crowd on the Senior high hard-wood to retain its one-game lead in the hectic City Class A basketball league race.

While the sharpshooting Sportsmen were hitting their stride for the first time this season, the Westinghouse quintet shot into possession of second place by turning back the fighting Ira D. Ling Canzols, 27 to 22, in the thrilling opening melee. The victory left the Westies a game behind the leaders and one ahead of the idle Elks club.

Led by Al Sticker and Tom Farrell, the Yunker club, strengthened by the addition of three new players, had little trouble disposing of the Oilmen. The Mack outfit was in the thick of the contest for about five minutes. And then Jimmy Breres' machine started clicking on all fours. Early in the game the losers were trailing by a 5 to 3 count.

The league leaders piled point on point and at the half were leading, 28 to 11. Breres used every available man and only two failed to tally a point. They were Harry Munster and Bob Charles, a new member, but they only saw a few minutes of action. The other two newcomers, Bob Fisher and Glenn Irey, of Shelby, both turned in creditable performances.

Sticker set the individual pace with 13 points with Farrell adding 12 more. Harold Bollantz topped the losers with seven.

The Westinghouse-Canzol clash was a nip-and-tuck affair with the clubs knotting the score on five different occasions.

Vern Jones' combine, with Inwood Smith, erstwhile Mansfield cage and football ace and an All-America at Ohio State a few years ago, in the lineup had to rally in the fading minutes to take the decision.

Canzols Held Lead.

The Canzols went into the second half sporting an 11 to 8 lead.
